Pupils, Trapped By Flames, Hurt In 2-Story Leap

8 Children in Hospital With Broken Bones and Burns, Others Bruised and Shaken After Stairs Fall in Building at Clifton Forge, Va.

Parents, Teachers Implore Children To Risk Plunge as Blaze Advances

Youngsters Hesitate, Then Obey; All of 180 in School Are Saved, Firemen Climbing Ladder to Rescue Last Boy Left Inside.

By the Associated Press.

Clifton Forge, Va., Nov. 13.—Heeding the pleas of teachers and frantic parents who begged many to jump, all the 180 pupils escaped from the burning Selma School today before the flaming walls collapsed, but eight of them lay on hospital cots tonight with broken bones and burns.

Ten-year-old Ruth Van Buren was seriously hurt, suffering from internal injuries as well as a fracture of the wrist, when she jumped from a second-story window after the collapse of the stairway cut off safer exit.

All the children on the first floor of the four-room building ran out and one classroom on the second floor was emptied of its pupils, but fourth-grade children in the other room were trapped when the stairway fell.

Hurtle to Ground.

Running to the windows, frightened and crying, with their teacher, Miss Dell Jackson, at their backs begging them to jump, the children hesitated. Frightened at the distance between them and the ground, but more afraid of the flames behind them, they hurled themselves from the building.

For some of them persons below broke the fall, but others hit with sickening thuds on the ground, fracturing ankles and wrists, and hurting shoulders and heads.

Nurses from the Chesapeake & Ohio Hospital at nearby Clifton Forge—across the Jackson River from Selma—placed the more seriously injured in automobiles and sent them to the hospital, while children with lesser hurts were treated on the scene and sent home.

Those Hurt.

Meanwhile teachers assembled their pupils, checked off the names and discovered that one child apparently was still in the building. Firemen who came from Clifton Forge to fight the blaze climbed a ladder and brought the child, almost suffocated, from the burning building. Nurses below resuscitated him.

Taken to the hospital were Ruth Van Buren, 10, fracture of wrist and internal injuries; Milton Craft, 9, fracture of both ankles; Mary Kidd, 10, burns; Lillian Lloyd Ap-

NotOut of Race, Declares Norris

To Make Decision at Election, Not Before, Senator Says.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 13.—Senator George Norris, Nebraska Republican independent, denied tonight that he said he would not seek re-election.

The 74-yearsold veteran of more than three decades in Congress said he would make his decision at election time next year—and not before.

"I did not say at Salt Lake City that I would not be a candidate for re-election. I am on vacation, and I want a rest. I am not discussing it," he said.

He referred to an interview with the Desert News, November 8, in which he was quoted as saying flatly "I am not a candidate."

At that time, questioned during a brief stop en route to California to visit a daughter, the News quoted the sturdy little Nebraskan as explaining:

"I have been in the Senate for many years. I am getting old and younger men can and should carry on the work which I have tried to do as a Senator."

"But a campaign would be a small disturbance, compared to the trouble my not being a candidate has cost me. I have received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States urging me to run next year."

Governor Bets Boar; Judge Signs Warrant

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Gov. Clyde L. Herring's good-natured wager of a prize boar struck a sour note tonight when a warrant against him for violation of Iowa gambling laws was sworn out in municipal court. Judge J. E. Mershon signed a warrant to be served as soon as Herring reaches Des Moines. It charges the Governor with unlawful gambling because he wagered a blue-ribboned hog on the Minnesota-Iowa game.

Court Officials said the warrant apparently was not a joke. It was filed by Virgil Case, weekly newspaperman and active supporter of Father Coughlin's Union for Social Justice.

'Eye for an Eye' Policy Pursued By Mussolini

Sanctions Attitude Disclosed; Talks Renewed With Drummond.

The War Crisis.

In Rome, Il Duce revealed a program of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" against sanctionist countries.

Britain snubbed Italy in diplomatic exchanges by disclosing it would not make an individual reply to Mussolini's protest.

In Paris, it was said Italy would postpone economic reprisals until it had received the French reply.

Libyan cavalrymen in northern Ethiopia routed Ethiopian warriors with lances after a sharp battle.

In the north, Makale was formally annexed by Gen. Emilio de Bono. In the south, Ethiopians were reported withdrawing toward Harar.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 13.—Premier Mussolini plans a policy of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" against the 51 sanctionist countries, it was disclosed tonight.

Diplomatic circles said his plan of treating other countries as they treat Italy explains why no blanket order will bar all imports.

Mediterranean Topic.

Authoritative sources, meanwhile, indicated Il Duce would hold further conversations with Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador, regarding the European situation.

An official statement concerning the renewal of the talks last night said only that they "dealt with the situation of the two nations in the Mediterranean." Great Britain has strengthened its Mediterranean fleet since the European tension arose because of the Italo-Ethiopian situation, while Italy has increased its garrison in Libya.

Premier Mussolini, in his note of protest to each country which had approved the League of Nations' sanctions plan, invited last-minute "repentance" by warning of the consequences and asking each country what it intended to do.

Tourist Trade Slumps.

Decrees have been prepared for immediate promulgation against nations which indicate continued pressure against Italy, but Mussolini intends to let the League powers become the "aggressors" in the economic war.

The drastic effects of sanctions reprisals have never been minimized. Mussolini warned the people they must prepare for hardships, but promised them a victory.

Italy normally imports goods valued at 7,500,000,000 lire (about $607,000,000) and exports products valued at only two-thirds of that amount.

The tourist trade, however, by bringing in foreign money, was an

Daveys Resume Tree Concern's Appeal on Tax

Decision to Drop Fight Is Revoked, Hearing is Continued.

By the Associated Press.

Hearing on the appeal of the Davey Tree Expert Co. of Kent, Ohio, from an asserted income tax deficiency of $4,283.36 was continued until December 12 yesterday at the request of attorneys for the company.

E. L. Bono, counsel for the company, said a telegram was on the way to the Board of Tax Appeals withdrawing one sent on Tuesday by Paul Davey, brother of Gov. Martin L. Davey and vice president of the company, which said the concern wished to drop the appeal.

Mrs. Martin L. Davey, wife of the Governor, who is president of the company, had been supenaed to appear yesterday, but was not present.

Mrs. Davey's Salary Involved.

The case concerned an asserted deficiency for 1930 and 1931. Part of this concerned disallowance of $4,416 by the revenue commissioner of the $9,916 salary claimed by Mrs. Davey.

Irving Tuller, Internal Revenue Bureau attorney, said the subpena was still in effect and unless there were other developments in the meantime she probably would appear in December.

When the case was called before the appeals board yesterday, Tuller moved to dismiss it—acting on the telegram sent on Tuesday by Paul Davey.

Bono, who said he had entered the case only on Tuesday and had not been notified, obtained an hour's delay in the proceedings.

When the appeal again was called, he said he had gotten in touch with

Clydesdales of Brewers Are Barred in Wichita

Wicita, Kans., Nov. 13 (AP).—The brewers' big horses will not trample the streets of Wichita, the city where Carrie Nation's hatchet once smashed saloon bars.

The commission, after hearing protests from the W. C. T. U. and other organizations, today refused to issue a parade permit to a national brewery company which wanted to exhibit its eight prize-winning Clydesdales before an old-fashioned brewery truck.

Crowds Agape Stand in Rain At Corinna Loring's Funeral

Onlookers at Mount Rainier Rites Scan Neighbors' Faces, Hoping for Sign of Murder Guilt; All Eyes Turn to Mother, Who Almost Swoons.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The body of Corinna Loring, slain bride-to-be, yesterday afternoon was sealed in a crypt in the chapel of Fort Lincoln Cemetery, exactly a week from the day appointed for the girl's wedding to Richard Tear.

In life, 27-year-old Corinna, a long-time resident of Mount Rainier, Md., pursued an unusually quiet existence. She was an efficient stenographer who spent long hours at her desk in downtown Washington. She was known in her suburban Maryland community as a church worker, a girl who didn't care for parties and the typical frivolities of youth. Few persons knew her.

But in death Corinna Loring, encased in a silvery coffin, was a magnet which drew turbulent, curious throngs from miles around. They came through the pounding rain, some of them to hear the comforting words of the murdered girl's pastor, the Rev. Robert K. Nevitt. But most of them surrounded the church and jammed the grounds near the chapel in the hope "something" would happen.

The members of the crowd scanned each other's face, hoping to detect some sign of guilt, some action which would betray the murderer. They stared with unashamed curiosity at the slain girl's family to see how they "were taking it."

Mrs. Frances Loring, Corinna's mother, who has assumed the aura of a mystery woman through her refusal to see anyone but members of the family since her daughter's body was found last Saturday, was the cynosure of all eyes.

The church was packed; the coffin was in front of the altar when Mrs. Loring, her eyes tightly shut, walked slowly, blindly, down the center aisle, supported by her husband, George A. Loring, and her son, Frank.

"I'm all right," she repeated several times as she was led stumblingly to a front pew where another daughter, Florence LoJacono, and her husband, Leo, had already found seats.

A white-robed pianist, high in the choir loft, played "Rock of Ages" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

Mrs. Loring kept her eyes shut through the music, through the singing by four white-robed women of "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Then came the clear, strong voice of the pastor:

"Thou turnest man to destruction and sayest, 'Return, ye children of

Much-Closed Drama To Try Cleveland Now

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Sam H. Grisman, producer of the play "Tobacco Road," closed both in Chicago and Detroit, announced today his Detroit company would move to Cleveland, to appear in the Masonic Auditorium there.

The dispute over "Tobacco Road" ban in Chicago still is in the Federal courts.

Frank Navin, Detroit Tigers' Owner, Is Dead

Baseball Man Is Stricken While Riding Horse; Wife Discovers Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 13.—Frank J. Navin died of a heart attack today, five weeks after his Detroit Tigers gratified the long-deferred ambition of his life by winning the world baseball championship.

He fell, unconscious, from his favorite riding horse at the Detroit Riding and Hunt Club and died without recovering consciousness. Coroner Albert A. Hughes, after a post-mortem examination, said death was caused by stoppage of the heart by a blood clot in an artery.

Close associates said the 64-year-old silent man of baseball, a power for nearly three decades in the national game, had paid, almost literally, with his life for the one world championship his baseball team won.

Five years ago, those friends disclosed today, his physicians told him he must sell his baseball club and shun all excitement if he wished to prolong his life. Repression of his emotions, his outstanding characteristic, had taken its toll in stomach and heart disorders.

Not only did Navin refuse to heed that advice, but he set out more resolutely than ever to build a baseball team that would be the peer of any other in the colorful history of the game.

His fortune was depleted by the depression, but he borrowed $100,000 and bought Mickey Cochrane as manager, in the greatest gamble of his career. That was at the close of the 1933 season.

One month and six days ago, the inspired Tigers climaxed two successful seasons by defeating the

Girl Witness Fails To Attend Probe Of Loring Killing

NRA Clerk, Who Went With Fiance of Slain Corinna Loring Before He Met Victim, Gone to Visit Friends in Virginia, Inquirer Told.

Brother-in-Law of Bride-to-Be Is First of 50 Called to Testify

Washington Criminologist Says Strands of Hair Found Clutched in Hand of Dead Woman Match Those of a Suspect in Mount Rainier Crime.

The first of 50 witnesses in the Corinna Loring murder began parading through a second-floor room in the old courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday afternoon, but at a late hour one of those "invited" had failed to appear.

This was Miss Edith Tavenner, clerk in the NRA, described by police as a former "girl friend" of Richard Tear. She and Tear went together, it was said, before the latter fell in love with Corinna Loring.

Miss Tavenner, police said, was scheduled to appear voluntarily for questioning at 4:30 o'clock, following the Loring girl's funeral in Mount Rainier yesterday.

At Miss Tavenner's home, in the 400 block G street northeast, a Post reporter was told she had telephoned about 3 o'clock to say she was spending a "couple of days" with friends in Virginia.

Deputy Sent to Home.

Lieut. Detective Joseph H. Itzel, of Baltimore, who is in charge of the investigation, emphasized that Miss Tavenner had merely been "invited" to go to Upper Marlboro. It was learned, however, that a deputy sheriff was sent to her home to provide her with transportation.

Itzel and State's Attorney Alan Bowie, of Prince Georges County, planned to talk to witnesses far into the night.

First to be called was Leo LoJacono, husband of Corinna's younger sister, Florence, and the man who brought Corinna and Richard together.

Waiting to be questioned was Mrs. LoJacono, Tear, and his brother, Jack, and Frank Loring, brother of the slain girl, who appeared in an Army uniform.

Other Developments.

Frank, who is stationed at Fort Monroe, said he did not think his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Loring, would appear at Upper Marlboro until today.

While the investigation went ahead in Upper Marlboro, there were two other developments in the case.

The Post learned that Lieut. Itzel and Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, District coroner, had emphatically opposed the calling off of an autopsy on the body of Jacob Van Allen, uncle of Corinna and a cornetist in the Army Band, who died shortly after the girl's body, beaten and strangled, was found Saturday afternoon.

A heart attack was given as the cause of his death, but Itzel, Police Chief Gene Plumer and others wanted to ascertain whether his stomach contained poison.

An autopsy had been proposed, but an official of Prince Georges County said it was needless. Van Allen was buried yesterday half an hour after Corinna Loring.

Hair Strands to Fore.

The strands of hair found caught in a button on Corinna's coat came to the forefront yesterday when Robert W. Hicks, local criminologist, said they matched the hairs of a suspect in the murder.

Hicks, now employed as a per diem worker in the District Highway Department, declined to name the suspect.

He said four samples of hair labeled A, B, C, D, were submitted to him Sunday with a strand of hair found caught in Corinna's coat sleeve.

Hicks said that "definitely" one of the sample strands is similar to the hair found on the coat.

Sworn to Secrecy.

He said he had promised State's Attorney Bowie not to divulge whether the hair that matched was that of a man or a woman.

"That would give the case away," he said.

He said he also analyzed particles of human flesh found under the girl's finger nails, but these, he explained, were so minute as to be valueless.

Hicks said he worked for six months on the Lindbergh case.

Bankers' Vote Rejects Link To New Deal

Vice Presidency Refused to Bennett; Roosevelt Asks Lower Interest.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—A brief but bitter fight over the New Deal among members of the American Bankers Association ended abruptly today when a candidate for second vice president, charged with being associated indirectly with Government controlled financial institutions, withdrew from the race.

The controversy broke after the convention had heard predictions of future prosperity and a call from President Roosevelt for lower interest rates to stimulate recovery.

Another Gets Post.

The New Deal was injected into the election when the convention refused to accept the nomination committee's selection of E. G. Bennett, of Ogden, Utah, for the second vice presidency, a stepping stone to the presidency in 1937.

Orval W. Adams, Salt Lake City, who criticized the Roosevelt recovery program in an address Monday, was nominated from the floor by backers who charged Bennett with being indirectly associated with Government controlled financial institutions.

Bennett withdrew from the race after a secret ballot, ordered during a wild session, was under way, leaving the uncontested post to Adams.

Before withdrawing, Bennett replied to charges of Adams' backers that it was "bunk" and "absurd" to inject national issues into the election.

Difficulties Foreseen.

The hope that interest charges would be pared in order to put large bank reserves to work was expressed in Washington by Mr. Roosevelt, who agreed expanded banking activities would play an important role in the recovery program, if properly used.

Unless this money was released within a reasonable time, he added, the large deposits would slow up recovery.

The President's views were expressed while the bankers were re-

Woman Assassinates General Slated to Rule North China

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, China (Thursday), Nov. 14.—A praying woman assassin who chose a Buddhist temple to slay Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang, often called Japan's choice for leadership of an independent North China, was in the hands of police today.

The 25-year-old, well-dressed slayer turned from an attitude of prayer as Sun entered the temple to attend a Buddhist meeting yesterday and emptied her revolver at the general.

Then she calmly surrendered to police.

Investigators reported that the woman was the daughter of the late Gen. Sze Chung-Pin, and that she blamed Sun for the execution of her father.

Sun, once one of the most powerful war lords in China, has been a stanch opponent of the Nanking government. He was 50 years old and had been living in retirement in recent years.

The temple where the shooting occurred is in the Chinese section of the city.

Sun had been governor of Chekiang province, then military governor of Fuklen province and finally was placed in control of the whole of the lower Yangste area.

He declared war on the Canton government in 1926, contending the

Malbrouk's Victory, Worth $21, Is Ascribed to Rest at the Post

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 13.—The horse Malbrouk probably could kick a pair of dice and make them roll seven every time he tried. Twice he has been sent postward at this track and twice he has been returned the winner only because Lady Luck was on his side. Today's victory came in the Garrett, the feature race of a rainy-day program. By a length and a half, he led Our Reigh to the wire with Boston Brook another two lengths away.

According to those who figure horses by weights and times, Malbrouk had the race within his grasp before the running began. Arriving at the post in a fractious mood, he jerked against the hold of an assistant starter and the bridle broke. Attendants, aided by Starter Milton, repaired the damage; but during the three minutes that elapsed, Jockey Meade was standing on the track and Malbrouk was relieved of the weight. The other horses, mounted, of course, stood in the stall gates.

When the start finally came, Meade rushed Malbrouk into the lead and it was all over but the pay-off from that moment until the

French Expect Italy to Delay Trade Reprisal

Franco-German Discussion Indicated; Paris Increases Naval Fund.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 13.—Official circles said tonight they understood Premier Mussolini would postpone economic reprisals against France and also would halt Italian press attacks upon this country.

Financiers had feared a serious blow to France if Italy adopted reprisals because of Paris' support of League of Nations sanctions.

Authoritative quarters said the Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, informed Premier Pierre Laval that Il Duce had decided on this action while awaiting a French reply to his protest against sanctions.

These sources indicated, however, that Laval told Cerruti his declarations at Geneva in support of the League action—while seeking a friendly solution of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict—answered Mussolini's protest.

Delay of Reply Is Expected.

The French note of reply was expected to be delayed until Great Britain's answer was sent. Usually well-informed circles said the British had advised the French they would withhold their statement until after the British general elections tomorrow.

Diplomatic circles drew attention to the possibility of Franco-German discussions looking toward a rapprochemnet. It was disclosed that M. Abetz, aid of Joachim vno Ribbentrop—Adolf Hitler's special representative—was in Paris, as was Andre Francois-Poncet, French Ambassador to Berlin. Roland Koester, German Ambassador, has asked Laval for an audience.

Navy budget figures published today revealed France will increase its naval expenditures in 1936 by 526,000,000 francs (about $34,190,000) over 1935.

$223,500,000 Naval Budget.

The total naval budget of 3,429,000,000 francs (about $223,500,000) includes 378,000,000 francs for material and construction work which involves building new ships and aircraft. The budget figure for this work was 347,500,000 francs in 1935.

The navy asked 1,547,000,000 francs for floating equipment and 307,000,000 francs for naval aviation, both increases over 1935.

Among the other increased expenses in the budget was the addition of 4,650 men to the navy.

The newspaper Le Temps said Italy's note protesting application of sanctions shows Italy wants a mandate in Ethiopia.

"One may for the first time see clearly," said Le Temps, "that Rome does not demand annexation, but mandate to police and administer the northern and eastern provinces of Tigre and Ogaden with the approval of the League."

Fairmont Unit Launches 13 More WPA Projects

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Thirteen additional WPA projects were started today in the second district, which has headquarters here. Two more will start tomorrow and ten November 19, bringing the number of workmen to 3,952 on WPA rolls.

Today's projects include 67 men assigned to road construction in Marshall County; 33 on similar construction in Preston County; 35 assigned to creek and hollow work in Preston County; 50 assigned to similar work in Brooke County; 91 to road work in Harrison County; 53 to road work in Monongalia County, and 52 to the Lumberport road in Harrison County. Twenty-four men will begin work tomorrow on creek and hollow roads in Preston County.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The pound sterling hardened slightly while gold currencies ruled about steady against the dollar in world exchange dealings yesterday. Silver monies again moved narrowly.

The British unit gained ¼ of a cent in New York at $4.92¼. The dollar eased slightly at 4.02⅛ to the pound sterling in London.

In American trading the franc was level at 6.58⅛ cents, and banking circles heard that gold had been engaged in Paris for shipment to New York. Earlier in Paris the dollar firmed a little at the equivalent of 6.587 cents.

Shanghai dollars declined 0.12½ of a cent in New York at 29.87½ cents, while Hongkong funds were 0.02½ of a cent improved at 34.32½ cents.

Swiss francs at 32.52 cents and guilders at 67.92 cents were each unchanged at New York.

Between You and Me

Other Side of Reich Steel Deal; Hoover Adviser Here; Bad Break for Bennett.

By Raymond Clapper

A LITTLE more information might aid in clearing up the controversy concerning purchase of steel from Nazi Germany for the Triborough Bridge in New York, which is being built with the aid of PWA funds.

At first glance the clamor against using Government relief money to buy foreign steel seems thoroughly justified. Why should our public funds be used that way when our own steel mills need the orders?

But there is a hint that we may not have the whole story. An official of the Wooderest Construction Co., the sub-contractor who bought the German steel, says that no American manufacturer produces this particular kind of article, which is a special type of steel piling. He asserts that American steel men have known about this type of steel piling for 12 years. He says his company has tried to induce them to manufacture a type of steel piling similar to this German type, but without success. He adds that the saving amounted only to $4,000, which is negligible on his $1,579,000 contract and that his company would willingly sacrifice that amount if American manufacturers would supply the type of material needed.

It would help keep the argument straight to have that point cleared up. If that is a correct statement, it puts a different color on the argument and makes you wonder what has happened to the initiative and business enterprise of our own rugged individualists in the American steel industry.

A rare and silent visitor at the moment is Ben Allen, of Palo Alto, Calif., who probably is Herbert Hoover's closest political adviser now. He slipped into Washington the same day that Mr. Hoover arrived in New York to address the Ohio Society Saturday night.

Mr. Allen's recent reappearance at Mr. Hoover's side, after an interval of some 15 years, has aroused considerable interest among politicians who recall the role he played in Mr. Hoover's rise to fame. As an American newspaper correspondent in Europe, Mr. Allen brought Mr. Hoover to the attention of the American public in the early wartime days of Belgian relief. Mr. Hoover's prominence as head of that humanitarian operation resulted in his being called to Washington, after the United States entered the war, to be food administrator. Mr. Allen was placed in charge of all publicity and promotion work for the Food Administration and made Herbert Hoover's name a household word.

After the war, Mr. Allen left Washington to devote himself to his own business enterprises on the Pacific Coast.

E. G. Bennett, Utah banker—known all over the West as "E. G."—was in an uncomfortable spot at the American Bankers Association at New Orleans, as a candidate for second vice president, an office which almost invariably leads to the presidency two years later.

He finally withdrew because of strong opposition which was based on the ground that his election would tend to put the Administration in control of the A. B. A. This grows out of the fact that Bennett manages the vast Western banking and business interests of Marriner S. Eccles, New Deal head of the Federal Reserve Board. Opposition to election of Bennett as an officer of A. B. A. was striking actually at his boss, Eccles, and the New Deal monetary policies. Orval Adams, Salt Lake banker, who was chosen second vice president, is a Republican. He has been urged to run for Governor of Utah next year.

The hard part for Bennett in the fight was that, while Eccles is his boss, he himself is an anti-New Dealer, in the sense that he is a conservative banker who disapproves of many of the policies of the present Administration. He happens also to be a Republican although that is not a conclusive circumstance since Eccles also lists himself as one.

Some bankers and financial experts will disagree with President Roosevelt's statement to the American Bankers Association that bank portfolios and deposits reflect evidences of great recovery.

While most bankers would agree that there are many evidences of real recovery, most of them would not list the conditions of bank portfolios as one of them. Their main complaint is that they are loaded up with Government bonds. Banks hold 60 per cent of the Government debt. These holdings pay meager returns and bankers also are conscious of the danger they would face in event of a drop in the price of Government bonds.

Their feeling is so strong that Banker Orval Adams, of Salt Lake, told the bankers' convention that banks ought to refuse to take any more Government bonds until the Government brings about a better balance in its fiscal affairs.

Officially the breathing spell has not been declared ended, but President Roosevelt says interest rates are still too high and Jesse Jones, chairman of R. F. C., says the Government should supervise and scrutinize the management and expenditures of the railroads more and more, and probably will have to stand by to provide the roads with more capital. Such suggestions are bound to give some people that choking feeling again.

ceiving reports of better times from Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor and Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist and financial writer, and a plea from Lewis H. Brown, president of the Johns-Manville Corporation, for aid in a drive for lower taxes and less cost in government.

O'Connor said in his convention address national banks made a profit of 3.93 per cent on capital in the first six months of his year and asked the bankers to share his optimism for the future.

"It has always been my custom to present the facts and never make a prophecy," he said. "These facts, however, and my general knowledge of the banking situation impel me now to predict that the present six months' period will be the best the banks of the Nation have enjoyed for more than four years.

"The storms of yesterday have subsided, the picture presented to you today is one of hope and good faith."

Says U. S. Is "Overbanked."

O'Connor joined Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Co., who spoke yesterday, in deploring the country's "overbanked" condition.

"A mad scramble to establish a bank opposite every gasoline filling station across this continent is not a situation which can be contemplated with any degree of satisfaction," he said.

The national bank chief added, however, that only 132 primary national banks had been chartered since October 31, 1932, which, he said, was the smallest number of national banks chartered in any three-year period during the last 30 years.

1,423 in Receivership.

In connection with rehabilitation work in the national banking field he said there are still 1,423 national banks in receivership, of which 593 with deposits of $1,067,524,707 have been placed in receviership since March 16, 1933.

He traced bank earningsdn recent years and said national banks during the year ended June 30, 1932, suffered a deficit of $139,780,000, or 8.91 per cent, based on capital; for the next year a deficit of $218,384,000, or 14.39 per cent, and for the following year a deficit of $303,546,000, or 17.46 per cent. He said the situation was changed on June 30, 1935, showing a profit of $71,372,000.

Various of his generals deserted, however, and he was beaten back by the southern armies, losing the key city of Hangchow on February 17, 1927.

For a time it was reported he might seek safety in Japan, but he reinforced his armies in the lower Yangste Valley and kept on fighting until June, 1928. Then he resigned command of the Shantung and Chihli armies and was replaced by Gen. Chi Hsieh-Yuan.

China Assures Japan

Shankhai (Thursday), Nov. 14 (AP). New Japanese insistence on complete choking out of anti-Japanese activities in China was met today with assurances of co-operation by the Nanking foreign office.

The assurances were given the secretary of the Japanese Embassy in the capital who cited recent Shanghai incidents, including the slaying of a Japanese marine, to foreign office authorities.

Newspaper reports that the Japanese had demanded abolition of the Kuomintang (Chinese Nationalist Party) headquarters were not confirmed by the Japanese Embassy, but sharp displeasure was voiced there over the party's asserted failure to halt anti-Japanese activities.

A Japanese committee visited H. E. Arnold, chairman of the municipal council of the international settlement here to request "effective and adequate" measures to allay uneasiness in Shanghai.

Bankers Urged By Roosevelt To Cut Interest

Believed by President to Be Means to Assist Recovery.

President Roosevelt yesterday suggested lowering of interest rates, especially on real estate loans, as a means toward assisting recovery by making bank reserves more easily available for investment.

The President's comment was interpreted as a broad hint to bankers, now in convention in New Orleans, and whom he expressed the hope in a message Tuesday that they would "provide credit where it can be done upon a sound basis to business and industry and to real estate.

Money Cheaper.

Following the President's remarks, made at his press conference, Stewart McDonald, director of the Federal Housing Administration, called at the White House with the information that money for home real estate investment is becoming cheaper and that 70 per cent of mortgage loans are being made by banks.

McDonald said that formerly many banks hesitated about making farm mortgag: loans but that now many of them are competing vigorously for the business. The FHA will not insure loans bearing interest at more than 5 per cent.

The FHA head said that he anticipates a home building boom next year and that during the last two months home bulding has increased 200 per cent over a similar period last year. He said he expected building of this type to be doubled or tripled next year.

Panic Fear Over.

"THhe fear of a panic is over," he said.

President Roosevelt said that if bank deposits are used properly they will materially aid recovery and that if they are not used in a reasonable way they will retard recovery. From some banks have come complaints that demand for loans has been so small as to constitute a serious question of what to do with surpluses that have piled up.

The President told of a farmer who was seeking a mortgage representing 40 per cent of the value of his property but who could find no one willing to lend him the money at less than 8 per cent. He added that the rate should be lower than 6 per cent but declined to name a specific figure.

Mr. Roosevelt added that in some parts of the South what he termed "pirate rates," running from 8 per cent to 10 per cent, had been the rule before 1933, but that these had largely been eliminated. He demanded to know why banks should not extend loans on good security.

Government Example.

Government emergency lending agencies have been setting an example in charging low interest rates. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been charging 3½ to 5 per cent. The Home Owners Loan Corporation charges 5 per cent and the FHA will not guarantee loans bearing more than 5 per cent.

While the President termed bank rates too high, the Associated Press reported that a committee of the United States Building and Loan League, meeting in Cincinnati, said the FHA rate was too low at 5 per cent. This committee contended 6 per cent was "a nearer approximation to the present economic interest rate on long-term credit."

Chairman John H. Fahey, of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, is expected to address the building and loan members tomorrow. Of the 11,000 building and loan associations which are members of the league, 3,400 belong to the Home Loan Bank system. These may borrow from 12 home loan banks at 3 per cent for periods up to 12 years.

person, 12, skull fracture; Thomas Agnor, 13, wrist fracture; Norma Hayslette, 12, burns, bruises; Floyd Bethel, wrist injury, and Frances Johnson, shoulder injury.

Thomas Agnor was dismissed from the hospital after his broken wrist had been placed in splints and Miss Jackson, the fourth grade teacher, was dismissed after treatment for a sprained ankle.

Miss Cora Moss, principal of the school, said 180 children were in the building when the fire was discovered soon after 11 o'clock. She opened her room door, she said, and saw the flames in the hallway. Sounding the alarm immediately, she saw the children from the lower floor leave the building, saw one class hurry down the stairway from the second floor and saw the fourth grade pupils jump back in horror as the central stairway collapsed.

Parents in Crowd.

When she left the building, mothers and fathers, anxiously seeking their children, were pushing their way through the crowd, while beneath the fourth grade room windows townsfolk and school authorities were urging the trapped pupils to jump.

Firemen were playing water on the blaze, but the 25-year-old building was destroyed.

The fire was discovered by Harold Huffman, a reporter for the Covington Virginian, in the late forenoon. Smoke was pouring from the doors of the building and a moment later, he said, he saw flames shooting out of the windows and doors.

Leaving his automobile, he telephoned the Clifton Forge fire department and then asked the telephone operator to summon medical aid.

When he reached the building a crowd had collected and he joined those who attempted to catch the children in their arms.

invisible "export" which more than balanced Italy's account. The tourist business slumped tremendously a sthe Ethiopian war approached, and it is thought sanctions may destroy what little remains of it.

Italy continued its war-like preparations, wit almost all men employed in public service now militarized. Many attend regular drill instruction.

At the same time, the government is daily ordering restrictions to enable Italy to bear the burden of sanctions, and is stimulating production and distribution of necessities.

London Rebuffs Rome

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—The British government rebuffed Italy today on its protest against sanctions and also announced no progress had been made by the two countries to relieve the Mediterranean situation.

Britain let it be known it is not planning an individual reply to Mussolini's protest against the League's invocation of sanctions, which was dispatched to nations separately.

Instead, London thinks a joint answer by all powers should be sent through the League of Nations. Italy specifically asked for the intentions of each country.

It also was stated that the talk yesterday between Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador to Rome, and Premier Mussolini was inconclusive and that no progress had been made. They are considering Britain's fleet concentration in the Mediterranean and large Italian forces in Libya, bordering upon Egypt.

Informed sources said Il Duce was doomed to disappointment if he is gambling for time in the hope of a more conciliatory attitude after the general election. They said positively there will be no weakening or change of policy.

British newspapers reported the first Italian reprisal against this country for sanctions. A London firm of perfumery manufacturers was notified by its suppliers in Italy that its credit facilities had been withdrawn.

Girl Witness Fails to Attend Loring Inquiry

Former Friend of Tear Gone to Virginia, Inquirer Told.

"mystery characters" in the case, intrigued police yesterday.

Mrs. M. Rozier Burroughs, 1217 Thirty-third street northwest, reported to Chief Plumer the woman peddler came to her door Tuesday and seemed to know a lot about the Loring case. She claimed, Mrs. Burroughs said, that she knew Corinna well and that Corinna once had paid her rent for a house in Mount Rainier.

Mrs. Burroughs said the woman appeared to be mentally unbalanced and became apprehensive when it was suggested that somebody be called to hear her story.

Jumped Into Auto.

The woman told her, Mrs. Burroughs said, she had hitch-hiked into the city from Hyattsville. Nevertheless, as she left, she jumped into awaiting automobile about a block away and disappeared in a hurry.

Stephen Devine, an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., who lives on the second floor of the Burroughs home, said the automobile which carried the woman peddler away was driven by "a heavy, tall blond man—almost an albino."

Chief Plumer said "something might come of this informtaion."

Lieut. Itzel, who solved the celebrated Brady bombing case in Prince Georges County several years ago, is tackling the Loring murder much as he did that mystery.

He is starting at the beginning, and, as he sees it, the case begins with those who were in the Loring home the night of November 4, when Corinna disappeared.

Tear has explained that early in the evening of that day, he picked up Corinna at her place of employment and drove her home. Then he left to attend night classes at McKinley High School, promising to return afterward.

At the home, when Tear left, were Corinna, her mother and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. LoJacono.

Father in Cambridge.

Mr. Lohring, Corinna's father, was in Cambridge, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. LoJaconing say they departed for their own home about 7:30, leaving Corinna and her mother in the house.

Mrs. Loring, the last known person to see Corinna alive, left for the Mount Rainier Methodist Church at 8 o'clock and arrived there ten minutes later.

When she left, Mrs. Loring has said, Corinna was in a house dress and was ironing clothes in preparation for her marriage two days later. She seemed "very happy."

Jury Ruling Awaited On 'Claw Machines'

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 13.—Operators of claw machines in Hagerstown and Washington County are awaiting the verdict of the November grand jury, which has seen one of the machines in operation.

One proprietor announced today that he had entered an agreement with the prosecuting attorney to deliver a claw machine to the jury upon learning that seizure of these machines was contemplated. The grand jury may either return an indictment against operators, or if it decides that the machines are games of skill and not of chance, drop further action. In the meantime the claw machines are being kept out of operation.

men' . . . Thou carriest them away as with a flood . . ."

Soldier Son Soothes Her.

Mrs. Loring opened her eyes. She swayed as if she were about to faint. Her son Frank, in the uniform of the United States Army, held a dab of amonia-saturated cotton beneath her nose. Time after time he revived her while her husband, perspiration shining on his face, attempted to soothe her.

The voice of the clergyman droned on, through the thirty-ninth Psalm, through the ninetieth Psalm, through verse after verse of the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians.

Mrs. Loring became more composed. Her eyes stared past the flower-covered coffin and focused on the white-robed figures in the choir loft, on the kindly-faced clergyman.

And all the while necks were craning, heads were turning as everybody tried to look at the dead girl's family. The church seats 300. At least 400 persons had crowded inside the small stone building, standing wherever they could. Hundreds milled around outside, jamming the steps leading to the front entrance.

Firemen, Policemen on Job.

Firemen and policemen patrolled the street and marshaled the throng much as if a carnival were in progress. There were few men inside the church. They stood outside in the rain so women could have what few seats there were inside. But there were many women who could not get in, who stayed out in the cold rain, warmed by the hope that "something" would happen.

At least an hour and a half before 2 o'clock, the time set for the funeral service, a crowd gathered before the small stone church at Thirty-fifth street and Bunker Hill road. By the time the doors were opened at 1 o'clock, the policemen and firemen were forced to take charge of the parade of automobiles and people.

Many View Body.

Many persons in that throng had first driven to Hyattsville to peer through a lace veil at Corinna's body as it lay in Gasch's funeral home. The long procession past the coffin began at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. It continued until the lid was closed for the last time, preparatory to loading the coffin into the hearse for its trip to the church.

The crowd was determined to see what it could of the last rites for the murdered bride-to-be. Hundreds who gave up hope of getting into the church pushed on to the cemetery and there awaited the hearse and the dead girl's family. When the crowd on the rain-soaked grass was joined by members of the throng who had stationed themselves outside the church for the length of the service they pushed and shoved and trampled each other, trying to get inside the little cemetery chapel.

Only a hundred or so made it. With difficulty, Mrs. Loring was led down the center aisle, again supported by her husband and son. Richard Tear, the young man who had planned to marry Corinna, stood behind his dead fiancee's father, clinging to the back of the chair.

In the church young Tear, accompanied by his mother, two sisters and two brothers, had seemed composed. At first he sat near the coffin at the end of the pew occupied by the Loring family. After a few minutes he moved to a seat in front beside one of his brothers. There he sat calmly through the funeral service. But as the clergyman spoke the commitment rites in the chapel, Tear bit his lips and blinked back tears.

Mother Causes Concern.

Mrs. Loring sat with bowed head, compressed lips and closed eyes while the Rev. Nevitt led the group in repeating the Lord's Prayer. The LoJaconos and Tear went through the words, scarcely moving their lips. The dead girl's father and brother gave all their attention to the mother. Several times she seemed on the verge of fainting. Her son revived her each time with the ammonia-soaked dab of cotton.

The Rev. Nevitt lifted an arm in benediction over the flower-strewn coffin.

"The Grace of the Lord, Jesus Christ, the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all, Amen."

There was a moment's silence. Then the crowd stirred restlessly. Tear, with one of his sisters on his arm, rushed forward and clasped the hand of the undertaker who had had charge of Corinna's body. Then he hurriedly left the chapel.

The Lorings lingered. Mrs. Loring seemed to want to stay. She murmured a few words, unintelligible even to her family. Finally her husband and son got her to her feet. She closed her eyes, swayed, and then jammed her hands deep into the pockets of her coat, much as she had done when she left the church following the funeral.

Goes Back to Seclusion.

Slowly she was led to a waiting automobile, where she was joied by her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. LoJacono. The car sped to the Loring bungalow at 3110 Beach street. Mrs. Loring once more went into the seclusion she has insisted upon since the finding of her daughter's body last Saturday.

Still the crowd milled about the little chapel. There had been rumors that arrests would be made immediately after the funeral. There had been a report that a psychiatrist would move through the throng seeking to find a telltale expression of guilt on someone's face. Still, nothing exciting had happened. The crowd couldn't understand it. It surged into the little dark room and pushed toward the coffin.

The coffin had disappeared. Already the denim-clad cemetery workmen had shoved it into the crypt. They were sealing the opening by the time the crowd found its way down cloister-like corridors. Men and women—mostly women—craned their necks, following every movement of the workmen.

Mass of Flowers.

A few persons were content to stay in the chapel and examine the flowers left behind. There was a huge cluster of chrysanthemums bearing a card "From Mrs. Tear and family." There was a spray of roses. The attached card said simply "Dick." There were masses of flowers from Corinna's office, from her church, her Sunday school class, from her friends and family.

Twenty members of the dead girl's Sunday school class carried the flowers, first into the church, then from the church to the chapel. Husbands of six of those members carried the coffin.

Few tears were shed at the service. The atmosphere was taut and not conducive to weeping.

The Rev. Mr. Nevitt, in his brief sermon, said:

"We want to realize in our own hearts that this young life, which had been rich in blessings for so many of us, is not completely over. Her sweet influence will be perpetuated in the lives of those who knew her. All the days ahead she will exert a fragrant influence over this community."

Services Brief.

The entire service was brief. It started at least five minutes before the appointed time. Within an hour Corinna's body, dressed in a white satin blouse and black skirt she had intended to wear on her honeymoon, was sealed in the crypt. But even now it has not found its final resting place. Within a few months it will be moved to the Loring lot, now in the process of being landscaped.

As the hundreds of persons who had gathered at the church moved on to the cemetery a half mile away they passed a movie theater plastered with signs which proclaimed:

"Woman Wanted."

It was the name of the picture being shown inside, but dozens of men and women pointed to it, finding it significant, since police and detectives have advanced the theory that a woman had an important part in the actual slaying of Corinna Loring.

the company and that the new telegram had been sent.

Lawyer "Embarassed."

Tuller opposed any continuance on the ground the company had "ample notice" in September, and "to allow two months to elapse and at almost the last minute request a continuance is untimely."

The continuance motion was granted, however, by Charles R. Trammell, member of the board. Previously, he had observed that a corporation itself had more power than its counsel to have an appeal dismissed.

Bono told him he thought his (Bono's) position was "embarassing" because he did not know of the initial move by the firm to drop the appeal.

"The best thing I can do for the country is to create industry by building good motor cars."
{FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT SIGNED BY HENRY FORD IN AUGUST, 1933}

Thank you, Mr. FORD.. for the finest V·8 we've ever demonstrated

ONE thing has always characterized new Ford cars. They have consistently outstripped all previous standards of dollar value.

In the 1936 Ford V-8 we, as Ford dealers, realize that we have the finest car at its price ever built in America. We're proud of this new V-8. We're proud of its ability to demonstrate its own superiority to American car buyers.

Here is the same, constantly improved V-8 engine that powers over two million Ford cars on the road today. To the proven supremacy of that engine, Ford now adds—new beauty of line and body colors—easier steering and gear-shifting with even quieter gears, and many other improvements that you will see and feel as soon as you drive this car.

We have known Ford cars for years and we know, beyond question, that the 1936 Ford V-8 is the finest V-8 we've ever demonstrated.

EASIER, SYNCHRONIZED SHIFTING AND STILL QUIETER GEARS—silent, helical gears for all speeds in the transmission.

NEW FREEDOM FROM NOISE—The result of a specially insulated, welded-steel body, reinforced with steel.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c. Advt.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

FORMERLY inactive in organizing employes in the New Deal agencies, the National Federation of Federal Employes announces its membership campaign is being extended to those agencies in connection with the federation's Nation-wide drive to strengthen and extend the merit system.

BAKER.

In line with organization work in the New Deal agencies, the N. F. F. E. is sponsoring the Logan bill for the extension of the merit system to all Government employes. The bill calls for noncompetitive examinations and classification. It is also applicable to numerous employes in the older departments and offices not now covered by civil service.

Employes of Federal Housing Administration are organizing, and initial steps already have been completed. A meeting will be held at FHA this week to work out charter details.

The social season of the N. F. F. E. unions in Washington will be launched Friday night by Local No. 2, said to be the largest group of Government workers in the District. A dance will be held at the Willard Hotel, beginning at 10 p. m., with music by McWilliams' Orchestra.

The dance will mark the termination of the first phase of the Merit System Defense Fund Campaign, locally, which involves the pledging of $1,000 to the fund. The new membership and orphanization phases will start simultaneously Friday.

Local No. 2 is reported already to have raised more than 75 per cent of the amount pledged toward the preservation of civil service principles in the Government service. All employes are invited to contribute, whether they are members of the N. F. F. E. or not.

Peter von Thedan (C), auditor, Soil Conservation Service, will be transferred to the Regional Office at Albuquerque, N. Mex., this month.

Hrdlicka Lectures Tonight.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology, National Museum, will give a lecture in the auditorium of the Museum, Tenth and Constitution avenue, today at 8 p. m. His subject will be "Results of the Most Recent Anthropological Explorations in Alaska," and it will be a report on his work there during the past summer. The public is invited; no card of admission will be required.

Dr. William Bowie, chief of the Division of Geodesy, Coast and Geodetic Survey, writes on "The Origin of Continents and Oceans" in the November Scientific Monthly.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Rubin, Harry Rose, Ann Greenway and other acts; screen, Rosaline Russell and William Powell in "Rendezvous"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McCrea in "Barbary Coast"); or C, Loew's Columbia (Joan Crawford and Brian Aherne in "I Live My Life.").

Dr. Marvin Agrees.

Heads of two local universities have replied to E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, with respect to his criticism of the apparent attitude of the Civil Service Commission in favoring unduly the college man, as against the man who has practical experience—a favoritism which extend, Mr. Babcock charges, both to appointments and to promotions.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin (F), president of George Washington University, agrees that there should be no special favoritism for college men. He writes:

"It seems to me that I might well repeat what I have frequently said with reference to college attendance. And that is, that no person should go to college unless his college experience is going to enable him to work harder and to greater social purpose, and to bring into his own life greater satisfaction, than he could if he spent the same amount of time in some of life's other activities.

"The mere fact of college attendance is not a reason for appointing any person to any task in life, and I feel that no truly educated person would care to have this yardstick used to measure his ability in comparison with that of another person. The estimate he would put on life would be the real one of attainment.

"It is true, of course, that those who attend a college or university are to an extent a selected group; for, either favorable conditions in their environment have directed them there, or they have been impelled by their own greater purposefulness and initiative. This very selective process lays upon college men and women a great obligation. And the social cost, to their families and to the community, of the years they spent in college or university, further heightens that obligation.

"I am glad you raise the question in the fair-minded way you do, for it seems to me that the time is at hand when American university men and women must prove all things and hold fast to that which is worth while in the creation of a finer citizenship."

Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray of American University feels that the question raised by Mr. Babcock concerns the Government alone, not the college administrations.

Experiment Station Appointments.

Claud L. Horn, former associate horticulturist of the Virgin Islands Experiment Station, has been appointed to a corresponding position at the Puerto Rico Experiment Station, Department of Agriculture. He will be in charge of economic plant introductions.

Dr. A. N. Watson, former assistant to the director of personnel and associate agricultural economist of the Bureau of the Census, Commerce, has been appointed biometrician and plant physiologist at the Puerto Rico station.

J. H. Kempton, Agriculture, in collaboration with Dr. R. A. Emerson, of Cornell University, has completed a preliminary survey of the system of maize culture practiced by the Maya Indians of the northern part of Yucatan Peninsula.

Work of Naval Observatory.

Question. What are the chief functions of the United States Naval Observatory?—R. Donnelson (C).

Answer. The Naval Observatory, a branch of Navy's Bureau of Navigation, maintains the correct-time service and broadcasts time signals 20 times a day. In addition, the administration for the development, supply, upkeep, repair and inspection of navigational, aeronautical and aerological instruments for the ships and aircraft of the Navy is performed by the Observatory. It also maintains continuous observations for absolute positions of the fundamental stars and for other astronomical data; prepares and publishes the Nautical Almanac and American Ephemeris and its supplements, and determines and promulgates information in connection with all solar and lunar eclipses. Capt. J. F. Hellweg is superintendent.

Q.—What and where is the so-called President's Cottage?—Alfred Stumpf (F).

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" sets in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So why not lose fat the easy way—without starvation diets or back-breaking, bending and rolling exercises? Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists. Advt

On The Air Today

BEFORE this day is over some network announcer will be the proud recipient of the American Academy of Arts and Letters annual award for diction on the radio. The honor will be conferred in connection with a half-hour celebration of Mark Twain's birthday anniversary, WMAL, at 3:30. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, will preside and Dr. William Lyon Phelps, whose articles on books and literature frequently appear in The Post, will talk on Mark Twain.

The diction award is determined by ballots. The Academy has an advisory committee of speech experts from schools of learning—about 60 in number. Their votes are tabulated by the Academy's radio committee, of which Dr. Phelps is chairman, and the candidates with the most votes are recommended to the board of directors. After approval of the recommendations, the names are sent to all members, who decide the winner on another ballot.

The award is made on the basis of pronunciation, articulation, tone quality, accent and cultural effect.

Milton J. Cross won the first award, followed by Alwyn Bach, John Holbrook and James Wallington—all of N. B. C. In 1932 the honor went to David Ross, of C. B. S., and in 1934 the Academy held no competition.

Inasmuch as the broadcast this year is through N. B. C. facilities it seems a safe conclusion that an N. B. C. announcer is the winner.

"Country Hi-Jinks," heard for these many weeks on Saturday nights (WMAL) moves this week, effective tonight, to Thursday nights, 7:30, same station.

A climax to a week of broadcasting in behalf of the Community Chest's drive will be staged by WJSV Saturday night at 7:30—a full hour of entertainment (no speeches!) by an all-star radio cast. Washington entertainers are invited to take part. To apply, phone Lee Everett, production manager of WJSV.

WRC introduces this week a new five-minute feature entitled "What Would You Say?"—a situation developed by dialog, with a "trick" ending. It was tried out unannounced Tuesday night and brought a heavy mail response—the answers to the question, "What would you say?" which ends each skit. Nightly at 6:50.

Premature Protests.

Spokesmen for the lumber industry, the dairy interests and various other protected groups have opened attack on the Canadian trade agreement without waiting to find out the actual terms of the accord.

The manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, for instance, asserts that a reported 50 per cent reduction in the tariff on that product would be "selling the lumber industry down the river" and Senator McNary has protested to the President against any reduction whatever in lumber duties. The dairy farmers of New England, New York and Wisconsin are also threatening political reprisals if duties on Canadian milk and cream are lowered.

If such objectors would wait until publication of the terms of the trade agreement, and then base their protests upon some demonstrable unreasonableness in the reductions, their position would be stronger. By their premature expostulations, however, they merely serve warning that they are prepared to fight any movement to expand the sale of Canadian goods in competition with the industries they represent. If this unyielding attitude, which is characteristic of lobbyists for protected industries, were permitted to determine the commercial policies of the Government, tariff schedules could never be revised downward. Efforts to restore international trade would have to be abandoned as futile, except insofar as such trade represents an exchange of strictly noncompetitive commodities.

In the long run, many lines of domestic agriculture and industry can expand and prosper only if assured outlets for surplus products in foreign markets. The short-sighted individuals who resent and resist any tariff reductions that increase the volume of imports are virtually obsessed by a fear of immediate loss to domestic interests. Thus they ignore the ultimately greater benefits to the country as a whole of an expanded foreign trade, especially with a good customer like Canada. The purpose of the reciprocal trade treaties is to further these long-time objectives. To do so, the Administration must stand firm against the indiscriminate assaults of those special interests who argue as though they believed that a dollar spent for foreign goods is necessarily a dollar lost to American industry.

If these "die-hards" had their way the country would have no option except to adopt an isolationist policy which would necessitate extensive reorganization of our domestic industry and agriculture, probably on a permanently reduced standard of living.

One Way To Help The Chest.

Commissioner Allen's statement, in discussing the Community Chest drive, that "there is no other way" to save the city's unemployed from the pangs of hunger, should be an effective challenge to donors. The District has been caught between an inadequate relief appropriation and a sudden withdrawal of funds supplied by the FERA. No means of relieving families becoming destitute through unemployment after November 1 is in sight, except the special fund sought by the Community Chest.

In pressing this point, however, it is well to note that this is a temporary situation recurrence of which should be avoided. The Community Chest has stepped in to bridge the gap between the termination of Federal responsibility and the resumption of municipal responsibility for care of jobless local residents. To point out that "there is no other way" of meeting this current emergency does not mean that the relief burden should be permanently saddled upon the Community Chest.

While lending their influence to the campaign of the Chest, with special emphasis upon the overflow fund, the District Commissioners have an even more important obligation to see that a reasonable policy of municipal relief is worked out before the next budget goes to Congress. Washington can and must take care of its own helpless citizens. That problem is too big for the Community Chest to handle permanently. Citizens who are contributing generously to overcome the disheartening consequences of the FERA's hit-or-miss relief policy ought to be given assurance that the community will take over the care of local unemployed as soon as possible.

Our tax structure may have to be revised. Certainly Congress will have to face squarely the problem of an equitable fiscal adjustment so that local tax revenue will not be absorbed in service rendered by the District to the Nation as a whole. Then it will be necessary to secure an appropriation sufficient to finance a rational relief program. The announcement of plans looking toward this objective would greatly strengthen the position of the Community Chest in seeking funds for the current emergency.

Credit Control Problems.

However cheap and abundant credit resources may be, business men will not be tempted to borrow more money from the banks, if they lack confidence in the future. Whenever fear and uncertainty give way to optimism, however, a great reserve of unutilized funds will become a threat to the stability of the credit structure. For that reason the current business upturn and the improved outlook have aroused public interest in problems of credit control and emphasized the dangerous inflationary potentialities of member bank excess reserves approximating $3,000,000,000.

A short time ago Dr. B. M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, urged that immediate action be taken to reduce these reserves before business expansion or speculative enthusiasm reaches a stage at which it would be much more difficult to apply the brakes. But efforts to cut down excess reserves, either by sales of Federal securities held by the reserve banks or by raising member bank reserve requirements, would hamper the placement of new Government issues at low rates of return, thus conflicting with the immediate interests of the Treasury. Consequently, as Dr. Anderson says, "an extraordinary degree of independence and courage" on the part of the Federal Reserve authorities would be required to wipe out any substantial proportion of existing excess reserves.

Furthermore, the Federal Reserve system is not in a position to make restrictive policies effective unless the Administration is prepared to co-operate with it. That fact was emphasized by Gov. Martin of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis in a recent address at the University of Illinois. He said: "The Government has such resources at its disposal that it could nullify any action taken by the system. * * * The system of itself can really accomplish very little without the thorough cooperation of the Treasury Department."

Unfortunately, the chances of securing Administration support for any credit policy that might temporarily check the pace of business expansion do not seem promising. The President appears to be quite unaware of the danger signs that mark the road along which the country is traveling. In one of his West Coast speeches, for instance, he pointed with pride to the great expansion in bank deposits as an indication of the progress that had been made toward recovery. He also mentioned the low rates ruling for money as a favorable development.

There was not the slightest hint that bank deposits have been swollen by the Government's borrowing and spending policies. There was no reference to the fact that abnormally low interest rates are the result of a restricted demand for funds combined with an excessive volume of bank credit "created" by government borrowing. Finally, there was no acknowledgment that deficit financing has given rise to budgetary problems which constitute a perpetual threat to the Nation's credit structure.

The President appears to be convinced that his monetary and financial policies have already rescued the country from the depression. And James A. Farley, in addressing the voters of New York before the recent election went so far as to claim that the Administration is responsible for all the business improvement since the spring of 1933. Such lack of discrimination, whether unconscious or deliberate, creates grave misgivings as to the willingness of the Treasury to support a program of credit restriction designed to forestall business expansion of an unsound character.

Federal Reserve authorities will not only have to be fearless in inaugurating control policies, but they will also have to be vigorous in persuasion to secure that measure of co-operation which is essential for effective performance.

"Ding" Resigns.

"Ding" Darling has resigned as chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, this time apparently for good and all. The deft Iowa cartoonist, whose pen has so often reflected his enthusiasm for the conservation of wild life, on Friday will quit the post to which he was appointed by President Roosevelt—another ardent conservationist—and from which he has threatened to resign at least once before. In his quitting lies a moral: It is a nerveless man, and one hardened by long years to infinite patience, who can hold out against Washington's fiends of frustration.

The last phrase is Mr. Darling's own. In a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post he described in a matter-of-fact tone the story of his fruitless efforts to divert some trivial part of the mammoth emergency appropriations to effective wild-life conservation. His plans dovetailed into the original resettlement program. The President and many lesser officials approved the scheme and wished him well. But he soon found himself bogged down in the welter of confusion, duplication and lack of co-ordination which many another Federal bureau chief knows to his sorrow.

There followed months of bickering and buck-passing, promises and withdrawals, orders and countermands. In the end some $8,500,000 was actually spent for wild-life conservation. Now Mr. Darling and his survey associates discover that while they have been sweating to foster and restore wild life, other Federal agencies have been at work, just as energetically—though of course, not deliberately—to destroy wild life. Where marshes have been restored for ducks in one place, vast sums have been spent to dry them up elsewhere.

Accordingly, blaming no particular party and no particular administration, Mr. Darling now resigns. Evidently he can see no point in further wrestling with the fiends of frustration nor will he submit to becoming their slave. It may be hoped that his going will speed rather than delay the day when efficient government will be the interest and activity of every man of ability, and when energy and enthusiasm in the public service can expect some better reward than disillusionment.

Langston Terrace.

As the District's first low-rental housing project gets under way an analysis of objectives and the possibility of achieving those objectives is in order. Langston Terrace is one of 50 building enterprises launched by the housing division of the PWA as "a national demonstration program of slum clearance and low-rent housing." That is a fine slogan, entitling the community to expect much from the development.

Langston Terrace will consist of two-story flats and row houses and three-story apartments, providing a total of 322 dwelling units. The allotment for the project is $1,600,000. If all of these units are built and the total allotment is used, these dwellings will represent an investment of nearly $5,000 per family accommodated. Obviously that high figure seriously impairs the value of the project as a demonstration of what can be done on a broad scale in the field of low-cost housing.

The housing division plans to rent the Langston Terrace dwellings to colored residents now living in sub-standard homes. To do that, rents must be reduced to a very low figure. The plan is to write off 45 per cent of the cost and extend amortization of the remaining 55 per cent over a 60-year period at a low rate of interest. Few municipalities, much less private enterprise, can match this generosity in building for its low-income groups. This PWA project is in danger of becoming, therefore, a pleasing model which is not applicable on a large scale.

Private interests have already demonstrated that apartments of moderate size can be developed in attractive surroundings within the Washington area at a unit cost slightly in excess of $4,000, under a mortgage guarantee from the Federal Housing Administration. Since these projects must be kept on a sound commercial basis, however, they cannot accommodate the very low-income groups. For the latter PWA is setting a considerably higher standard, with taxpayers supplying the difference in costs.

Moreover, Langston Terrace seemingly gives no direct assistance to the local slum-clearance program. Some of the families that are being moved out of alley shacks marked for demolition may find shelter in these PWA houses. If so they will be only a favored few. Those who are not fortunate enough to secure the benefits of PWA's generous subsidies will have to find old street houses or accept the much less pretentious quarters contemplated by the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Indications are, then, that Langston Terrace does not measure up to the objectives of its sponsors. It will wipe out no slums and its costs will forbid emulation on any extensive scale. This is the more regrettable because of the acute need for genuine low-cost dwellings in Washington. With the same amount of money in the hands of the Alley Dwelling Authority, a really important step toward rehousing the District's slum-blighted inhabitants might have been taken.

Kuhn Of The 79th.

The death of Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn at San Diego is keenly felt in this section of the country. He not only had many close personal friends in Washington, but a large percentage of the men in the Seventy-ninth Division, which put Montfaucon on American battle flags, were recruited from the District and nearby territory.

These civilian soldiers, trained by him at Fort Meade and later under his command in the bitter Meuse-Argonne offensive, were thus privileged to observe both his genius as a teacher and as a tactician. Possessing an astute capacity for observation, as well as an unusual ability to make practical use of his knowledge, he was one of those admirable, but not too common, commanders who are equally adept at paper plans and practical performance.

Gen. Kuhn served the Army in many capacities—at West Point, as president of the War College, as engineer officer, as military observer with foreign armies, as a World War commander, and as organizer of training activities for all branches of the Army. Perhaps one of the most delicate roles ever assigned to him was that of military attache in Germany, the country from which his father came, shortly before the United States entered the war. In spite of the many difficulties of this assignment, his diplomacy and personality won him many German friends, and much knowledge which he was destined to use later.

But perhaps the finest tribute to Gen. Kuhn is the fact that, in spite of their heavy sacrifices, he was highly popular with his troops.

With no idea of violating our neutrality, we unhesitatingly express the opinion that the bravest men mixed up in the Italo-Ethiopian war are the newsreel cameramen.

We're thankful that there is but one season of the year when we have to cudgel our wits in order to think of something for which to be thankful.

Relief In Alabama.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Alabama's relief administrator, Thaddeus Holt, is being feted in Washington because of the wonderful relief accomplishments in this State in taking all families off the dole and giving them work where they can feel respectable, there are multiplied thousands in Alabama facing starvation.

An editorial in the Birmingham Age-Herald recently referred to 100,000 destitute persons in this State eligible for relief and unprovided for in the relief program. The editor very properly questions the sincerity of Gov. Graves' statement that "nobody will starve in Alabama." So far, many have starved to death, or else death resulted from emaciation and undernourishment, especially among the children. There are in Birmingham and Jefferson County alone 30,000 destitute families unprovided for.

There are thousands of intelligent men and women in Alabama who are thoroughly disgusted with this fiasco in Washington and who will gladly welcome the privilege of voting for a Republican candidate for President, provided an outstanding man is selected and one who will command the respect and confidence of the people.

A Nonconformist Soldier.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Ex-Soldier" wrote a dandy yarn for the Armistice Day publication; but he had left out the "conclusion" relative to the hero desiring to 'beg forgiveness from the parents of the officer he 'pushed out' it would have improved the story in that it isn't exactly in conformity with the average reader's line of visualization to imagine a soldier begging pardon for the enemies he may bump off during a battle!

If such was really the proper practice, Iknow one individual who operated a machine gun at the battle of Cantigny, May 28, 1918, who would have to spend at least 10 natural lifetimes begging the forgiveness of parents of men that his gun blasted out that day! There is nothing effeminate about war!

Freedom Of Opinion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all spectacles likely to make angels weep and cynics sneer, none can quite equal that of Gen. Fries attempting to bully the board of education into banning the most casual and indirect reference to communism by teachers in the District of Columbia.

Sensible, well-balanced people in Washington and elsewhere have united in commending the board for its stand and have felt satisfaction when that body refused to be frightened by the blustering of the former head of the division of the War Department devoted to the speediest extermination of the human race by the use of poison gas. There has also been almost universal approval of the stand of Corporation Council Prettyman, whose opinion on the teaching of communism deserves to rank among the really excellent state papers recorded in the annals of our country.

However, several of these earnest and honest liberals have still missed a point. They have advocated the teaching of factual matter, of "what communism is," in order to "expose it." Gen. Fries, finding his original position of forbidding all mention of communism met with a widespread horse-laugh, recently suggested that teachers should "teach the evils of Marxism."

It is not the business of any teacher here or anywhere else in the United States to "teach the evils of Marxism" or "the evils" of republicanism or democracy or prohibition or wetism or the single tax. What the teacher should do is to explain that various doctrines exist; tell who advocates them; inform the student when the champions of given philosophies have been in control of the government and when others have succeeded them; tell what the popular and electoral vote has been; tell also something of the relative strength of these parties in other countries; mention frankly that Jefferson's Jacobin democracy was akin to the ideas of the French revolutionists, just as Hamiltonian federalism was similar to the views of English Tories and just as there is a certain similarity between the views of American Socialists and Communists and those of Marx, Enfels and various economists in many lands.

Wind up by impressing on the pupil that he has a right to believe in any set of principles, political, economic or religious, that he chooses—that even the opinions of small minorities are laid before him so that, when he makes his decision, he may be aware of the theories of every known group.

The teacher is not being paid to propagandize for the prevailing social system or the dominant political party or any other party. Let him tell the pupil candidly about all philosophies and permit the pupil to do his own selecting!

Gandhi's Birthday.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ghandi's birthday has lately been celebrated by his friends in many different parts of the world. He is 67. At the celebration in London the chief speaker was the Rev. C. F. Andrews, lately back from India. He reported Gandhi as in excellent health, and wholly absorbed in his efforts for the betterment of village life.

Mr. Andrews does not believe there will be any general outbreak of mob violence in India. Gandhi's great influence is cast against it; and "the spectacle of war and outrage in Europe has given rise to a feeling of repulsion in India."

China Risks Loss Of Silver.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One hesitates to take issue with so ably written an article as "Banking Reforms Put Chinese in Step With Great Powers," appearing in Sunday's Post under the name of Dr. Lin Lin. I am afraid, however, that Dr. Lin does not give enough weight to one or two very real handicaps which the Chinese government must encounter in putting into effect its monetary reforms.

Dr. Lin says: "Undoubtedly there is a large amount of silver hoarded privately (in China). But with 90 per cent of the monetary stock of silver available under the control of the government, the monetary and banking authority in China can with ease command the confidence of the world." The catch in this statement, of course, lies in the use of the term "monetary stock of silver." Has Dr. Lin any conviction that the monetary stock of silver in China represents anything but a small percentage of the silver stocks? Does he believe that the $547,000,000 worth of silver in stock at Shanghai accounts for a substantial proportion of the silver hoarded in China? If he does, and if the financial experts of the Chinese government agree with him, then I am convinced that they are in for a rude awakening.

Under Gresham's law, the "bad" money, represented in the minds of the 400,000,000 Chinese in the interior by the government's bank notes, will drive the "good" money represented by silver "sycee," or bars, as well as coins, out of circulation, i. e., into hoarding. The low price of silver in China, as maintained by the pegged exchange rates of the yuan, will encourage smuggling of silver to the United States at the higher prices. In other words, the purchasing power parity of the yuan will be determined by the world value of the very large hoarded silver stocks not controlled by the Chinese government and not by the small percentage controlled and made the basis of the new note issues.

This is manifest by an examination of the volume of the monetary silver stock of $547,000,000, as compared with the 400,000,000 population. Even on a 30 per cent coverage there is only a per capita note issue of about $4, whereas in this country we have $5,000,000,000 in currency and $20,000,000,000 in check money (bank debits) for a population of only 125,000,000. Check money in China is not in anything like the use it is in this country, as the bank debits of the three Chinese government banks and the various foreign banks in the ports will show. The conclusion, therefore, is that commercial transactions within China are and will continue to be settled by actual shipments of sycee (bar silver) until the private hoards become depleted through smuggling because of the low pegged price of silver within China. China will then be faced with the necessity for inflation or go on a barter basis.

The treatment of the balance of payment problem in China by Dr. Lin is, in my opinion, also far from adequate. He says: "It is hoped that the improvement of Chinese business at home and that of foreign trade will lessen the seriousness of the international payments situation."

How can Chinese business improve if silver continues to leave the country, as it surely will under the present program? Moreover, the improvement in Chinese business is affected by other considerations. The maintenance of order by the government is a prime necessity. Merchants cannot ship goods when they are constantly in fear of their confiscation by bandits. They cannot pay for them, even though they reach their destination safely, if war lords menace the safe transportation of the sycee bars that have to move back and forth from the interior with the seasonal fluctuations in demand for foreign and manufactured goods from the ports and supply of raw materials from the interior. The key to the whole monetary reform problem in China lies in the social and political reform problem, and can not precede it. I am sorry that I cannot share Dr. Lin's optimism as to the successful outcome of the monetary reforms that have been instituted, but I feel that before a horse can be driven it must first be tamed.

Post Office, Thursday.

ITALY has a surplusage of population—so she sets forth to conquer Ethiopia. (Well, that's one of her reasons: she says so herself.)

Japan has a surplusage of population—so she turns toward the Asiatic mainland. (Ditto—ditto.)

Meanwhile, England feels that she also has a population surplusage—so she holds conferences on the subject, and the conferences send deputations to the Secretary of State for the Dominions.

Oh, yes: it is, in this respect, a lot easier for Britain to pursue a peaceful policy than it is for Italy! Britian has more pacific resources than transpacific Japan. In brief, Britain has plenty of colonies—and there are those British Dominions for which James H. Thomas is the Secretary of State aforementioned.

Still, the differences of method are as interesting as are the differences of conditions.

As a matter of fact, it is precisely those Dominions that make the chief interest. If England, because of her unemployment problem, thinks she needs fewer people, a few of the Dominions think, on the whole, they could do with some more people.

The questions remaining unanswered are largely questions of time, ways and means.

The latest Redistribution Conference was held at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. And it is odd that so little was said about it by the English press—that almost nothing was said about it in the United States.

All the delegations evinced a plenty of good-will. The speakers for the mother-country made clear what the prospective emigrants ought to have. The speakers from overseas explained just what the various Dominions could provide, politically and economically—and just what they couldn't.

Although all parties thought that the day for definite action had not yet arrived, there was practical agreement that postponement should not extend "beyond the point of recovery from the economic difficulties which began to impede migration within the Empire six years ago." This is a euphemistic way of declaring: "A more or less artificial population-shift should be started as soon as the depression is thoroughly depressed."

And when will that occur?

There is "hope that the requisite conditions will soon be once more at hand."

* * *

Most of the speakers at Newcastle advocated settlements in self-sustaining communities: a procedure which, whatever its advantages, other speakers—pleading for settlement by infiltration—criticised as unduly expensive. Compromisers suggested that a start be made by infiltration, "perhaps reviving the system of individual nomination" and moving toward communal units only when the experiment was safely under way.

Everybody, however, at least implied that "emegration, to be as effective as desirable, should be aided" by the government.

That is what strikes the Post-Impressionist as the most significant note of the conference. It will probably strike Mr. Tugwell and his colleagues as the most significant note of the conference, too. And it strikes one of the Column's British contemporaries, the London Times, as significantly unpleasant.

Says the Thunderer:

"It was on this point that the Interdepartmental Committee addressed itself in its inquiry last year, and it would be a loss if the very real objections which the committee raised to large state expenditure in aid of emigration were overlooked in the present discussion. The majority of emigrants to the countries of the Empire have always been those who have gone mainly on their own resources, attracted only by prospects of bettering their fortunes.

"This stream will begin to flow of itself, once again, as economic conditions in the Dominions tend to improve. Already the movement by which some of the Dominions actually lost population on balance to the United Kingdom, in the years of depression, has been reversed. . . Direct state assistance to immigration will require the most careful thought."

The Post-Impressionist won't venture to call Mr. Tugwell's attention to the London Times and the Interdepartmental Committee. But we do call the attention of the Interdepartmental Committee and the London Times to Mr. Tugwell.

THE WHIPPING-POST.

We yield to none in our admiration of the Ned York Herald Tribune's F. P. A. We are proud to have been among his early "contribs." Perhaps that is why we wouldn't call him what he is called by one of our fellow columnists on The Washington Post. This fellow-columnist says Franklin P. Adams is the "conductor of that green bay-tree among humorous columns, 'The Conning Tower.'"

How about Ted Hall himself as the admiral of that temple of columnar orchids, "No End of Books"?

Fair Enough

En Route to Barcelona, Nov. 13.

THE train your correspondent boarded for Spain leaves Geneva at 9 o'clock in the evening. There are no sleepers, so passengers arrange themselves on shelves which are called couchettes and merely turn in like vagrants on a bench in the park or subway, subject to the intrusion of other passengers, there being four couchettes—two upper and two lower.

The condition, however, is that the subject has to tip ten French francs, or 60 cents, to the conductor, who may then tell additional passengers that there are no more couchettes left on the train. Additional passengers may then top the ten-franc tip with a fifteen-franc tip, but that is unlikely, as there are not many Americans in Europe at this writing.

And even if they should do so your correspondent has the right to call their cards and raise the bet. The passenger having expensive false teeth is advised to sleep with his mouth shut, as the used false teeth market is always active in Europe and passengers having worth-while sums of money are cautioned not to fall asleep at all.

• • • •

HOWEVER, these admonitions all seem foolish, as nobody is likely to have any money on leaving Geneva, and nobody is likely to sleep on a couchette.

It will be necessary to detrain about 9 in the morning at a place on the Spanish frontier called Port Bou (pronounced something like poor boy), because the Spaniards with shrewd foresight and judging the future by the past wisely built their railroads with either wider or narrower gauge than those of France.

In Madrid your correspondent hopes to look into the celebrated affair of the ice bill, in which poor Senor Daniel Strauss, the Mexican caballero, undertook to operate a game of skill called the straperlo, somewhat similar to roulette, and was shocked and dismayed to see his tools tossed into the street after he had made what he thought were necessary arrangements with the authorities.

The Spanish cabinet resigned when Senor Strauss complained to the president of the Republic, and two eminent patriots and statesmen were missing from the ministry when it was sworn in again. The affair of the ice bill in Spain seems almost as obstreperous as the notorious affair of Lapostrophe Oncle Stavisky, the Russian immigrant who became pawnshop king of France some years ago and almost caused a revolution when he failed to take down the shutters on his place of business at the sign of the three balls in Bayonne.

• • • •

WHEN inspectors entered to take inventory of banjos, boxing gloves, war medals and other stock which had been placed in pawn with M. Stavisky they discovered that he had loaned an extravagant amount of francs to his political friends.

And because French pawnshops are state institutions, the loss fell on the citizens. Lapostrophe Oncle Stavisky fell ill of a bullet wound and died. The amount involved is said to have been no more than $20,000,000—a trivial sum compared to the losses which American citoyens suffered in the failure of Mr. Sobbing Sam Insull's enterprises and in numerous other mishaps. But the French, they are a funny race, and they were so incensed that a riot broke out in Paris on February 6 last year in which troops killed 20 people to prevent their marching on the Chamber of Deputies and the lynching of some leading statesmen. The French are still seriously annoyed about the affair of l'Oncle Stavisky.

It's unlikely that the jury will agree on a verdict. Both the Affaire de la Glace in Spain and Lapostrophe Affaire Stavisky in France may be regarded as solemn warnings to the United States to avoid entangling alliances and the combination of American ideals with the corrupt morality of Europe.

No American Cabinet would ever resign merely because the police had broken up the tables on which games of skill were played, and even when American banks were popping like balloons in the gay haunts of pleasure at the witching hour of midnight on New Year's Eve there was no concerted movement toward the National Capital to lynch anybody.

The Speaker In England

Labor Party Startles Britain By Opposing Capt. Fitzroy.

By Edward Acheson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

BRITISH general elections, like American Presidential campaigns, are in the main sporting rather than political events. For the purpose of the present general election both the major parties in England have expressed themselves as being in favor of prosperity, interested in peace to the extent of being averse to wars, except unavoidable wars, and four-square for social progress of undefined dimensions.

Which, if not as it should be, was at least to be expected. But, even with the best will in the world, the combined efforts of both participants have, apparently, been unable to keep today's contest on a wholly superficial level. One vital question seems inevitable. The issue has been enjoined, squarely and finally, by the decision of the Labor Party's national executive committee to indorse a candidate in opposition to the Conservative member for Daventry, Capt. A. E. Fitzroy.

Which, stated thus, does not conjure up a problem of great pith and moment. Nor would it were Capt. Fitzroy merely the Conservative member for Daventry. But he isn't.

He is Speaker of the House of Commons.

And opposing the Speaker of the House of Commons is one of the many things in England which simply "aren't done."

• • • •

IN this particular instance, however, it "isn't done" for a very good and wholly practical reason. Unlike his Continental and American prototypes, the British Speaker has evolved, through a long series of minor adaptations, into "the incarnation of impartiality." On the assurance of this impartiality is based the whole logic of British parliamentary procedure. But unfortunately, the position of the Speaker himself, is now, and always has been, wholly illogical.

Elected twice, first as a member, then as Speaker, he assumes at one and the same time two mutually exclusive roles. As a member he is an advocate; as Speaker, a judge.

That he should be open, to challenge in his first capacity is the basis of representative government; but to force a judge to argue one side of a case over which he is presiding is fatally to qualify that impartiality which is the sine qua non of his status.

It is peculiarly illustrative of the British genius that this dilemma should in the past have been solved by compromise rather than partisanship, by custom rather than law. But it also demonstrates the dangers of such a procedure. For the whole vast superstructure of "The Speaker's Chair" has been erected on the doubtful foundation of "tradition" and the acquiescence of the opposition.

And today suddenly the opposition has ceased to acquiesce.

• • • •

IT DOES no good to point out that opposing the Speaker in his constituency is challenging the evolution of Britain's unwritten constitution. The Labor Party is perfectly aware of the issues at stake, but the inherent illogic of the Speaker's position has created another problem which can be and is argued with equal cogency; namely, that not opposing the Speaker in his constituency is to disenfranchise that constituency—in this case Daventry—during the Speaker's term of office.

The labor leaders being overanxious to prove their inherent "respectability" had no stomach for offending tradition. Energetically they tried to "fix up a deal" with the cabinet, by which the Speaker, once elected to that office, would be made a member-at-large or given a nominal constituency. There is every reason to believe that some such plan had met with provisional approval, but the Conservative cabinet, faced with an abrupt election, realized that any change would be to the advantage of the opposition, and furthermore that by doing nothing, they could force the Labor Party, which was already committed to its followers in Daventry, into the unhappy position of breaking with custom-attacking a defenseless man, and generally conducting itself in a low and bestial fashion.

For the alternatives before the Speaker, if attacked, are perfectly apparent. He can either fight back, in which case he "descends to the cockpit of party politics" and makes a farce of any pretense to impartiality. Or he says nothing whatsoever, and tries to conduct himself in a manner befitting the high office to which he has been called.

• • • •

CAPPT. FITZROY has chosen to strike the latter attitude, but has tossed in a whine for good measure. It isn't cricket, he complained bitterly, to sock a gentleman who can't smack back, and he for one didn't propose to imperil the office of Speaker by so much as one isolated smack. "For experience has shown in other lands," as was pointed out in the London Times, "that when the Speakership is a party perquisite the effect on parliamentary institutions is disastrous."

Which gives a fairly accurate idea of the British estimate of the

Its Speaker Challenged.

United States House of Representatives, where the Speakership is a party perquisite if anything. But learned parliamentarians would point out that the present condition of Congress is by no means wholly hopeless, since it is merely a phase, a stage in evolution, and unless subject to a stasis resulting in arrested development, it will pass.

It did in England. To reach the present perfection of a sixth-form debate presided over by the headmaster, the English House saw the status of its Speaker experience three distinct and important changes.

• • • •

THE Speaker, who, by the way, scarcely ever speaks and never makes a speech, derives his name from his original function. In the very dim past he petitioned the King on behalf of the common subjects. He emerges as an official in 1377, but very decidedly as the King's official. In effect, the "discreet and learned man" whom the sovereign nominated and the Commons elected was the recognized "quieter down." Through him, as through the small end of a megaphone, the howls of untitled were muted for royal ears.

For nearly 400 years the system survived, in this unsatisfactory condition, the Speakers themselves being mostly "servile," badly paid and generally second-rate. A surprising number, however, managed to die violent deaths. They were hung, they were beheaded, they were murdered or died in battle. A few were outsted for taking bribes. But it wasn't until 1629 that the House of Commons showed any signs of taking matters into its own hands.

In that year the Speaker, one Sir John Finch, decided he'd heard enough of a particular speech, so he rose. Now, when the Speaker rises, the house adjourns. But apparently the thing also works in reverse. For two members with great presence of mind grabbed the Honorable Speaker and held him in his chair while the orator continued to orate.

• • • •

THAT was the beginning of the end. By 1725 the Speaker had cast off the authority of the crown and become the servant of the majority party in the house itself. From this point on the processes of evolution seem to have been accelerated. Over the next century the march toward impartiality is almost uninterrupted. In 1790 a statute was passed which forbade the Speaker from holding other concurrent office, thereby emphasizing the importance of his Speakership.

In 1839 Speaker Shaw-Lefevre took office, and the evolution was complete. With the one exception that the Speaker is always elected from the majority party, the conditions for impartiality became as absolute as it was humanly possible to make them. As evidence of the result, witness the fact that during two Socialist governments, the Speaker of the House of Commons remained a Conservative. And the most radical opponent of capitalism had not one word of complaint.

This extraordinary display of genius in self-government is made possible only by the isolation and insulation of the Speaker. He is today above party and politics. Within the precincts of the house he is invested with a rank superior to that of the crown, he lives in a royal palace, has his own civil list and public household. His word is law and he has a private police to take offenders against that law to his own private court. In social precedence he ranks next to the Prime Minister and the Lord President of the Council. Once elected he serves successive Parliaments as long as he cares to serve, and on retiring from office he retires permanently from the House of Commons, almost invariably becoming a peer of the realm. During debates in which he never takes part, he is invested with the power "to accept or refuse closure, to reprimand or commit offenders." Like the Pope of Rome, "the Speaker of the House of Commons is infallible."

• • • •

OBVIOUSLY such unlimited power, position and authority, can only be granted on certain assumptions. The present-day Speaker exercises a tyranny which would have been wistful envy of his fifteenth century predecessor. Yet it is a delegated tyranny, and the whole procedure of the House of Commons, and hence the political life of England, is based on the assumption that it will be used only for unspecified but fully recognized ends. Which beautifully reveals the British predilection for depending upon men rather than laws.

And hence—Labor would add—his constituency must be disenfranchised until he decides to retire from the Speakership.

There is the situation—as nice an impasse as politics could conceive. And it is pleasing to see that the British are finding a characteristically British solution; they're postponing the issue. Instead of trying to work out some method of rationalizing the position of the Speaker, all the great of the land are rallying to see that the illogic is perpetuated. The Speaker will not defend himself. But Mr. Baldwin, Mr. MacDonald, Sir John Simon, Sir Herbert Samuel, Austin Chamberlain and Lloyd George have all rallied to his support. In all probability the present Speaker will be returned safely. Everyone will heave a long sigh and forget about the matter until next time.

Note To Paneleers

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

WASHINGTON'S weekly gatherings of black ties and barebacks are about to be resumed, giving the citizenry a chance to listen with awed attention to Dr. Will Durant's philosophical pleadings for a political aristocracy to replace the ward heelers, he having run across such an idea when he was reading up on philosophy for Mr. Haldemann-Julius, the little bluebook publisher of the pre-Mencken era. This is but one of many treats being offered by the Town Hall, which is importing to Washington a number of intellectuals, including Mr. Ogden Mills, Dr. Albert Edward Wiggan and Bob Hutchins, the boy wonder college president.

It is pleasant news to know that Mr. Studebaker's institution is bringing such thought-provoking gentlemen into our midst and I, for one, look forward to the heckling by the panel which will undoubtedly arise when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt discusses that profound subject, which I had thought answered by the sob sisters years ago, namely, "Should Women Be Allowed to Work?" Mrs. Roosevelt will be safe from the ripe verbal tomatoes of the audience, however, for the Town Hall, as conducted, is a genteel institution which does not encourage the paying seat-holders to arise and deliver orations during the period that comes just before the cold cuts and coffee.

• • • •

ITS gentility is all that annoys me about an otherwise excellent institution, having been brought up in a rowdier atmosphere than that allowed in the Shoreham Hotel. At one time it fell my lot to attend the Ford Hall Forum, known to its sponsors for more than a quarter of a century as the "safety valve of Boston," and to the policemen of the Joy Street Station as a public nuisance. Reserves were always kept on hand of a Sunday evening, just in case some communistic denizen of the West End got into a row with his seat neighbor, likely as not to be Prof. Kirtley Mather, of Harvard, or a member of the Red Squad, which used to attend these weekly brawls.

This institution drew a motley crowd of Jews, Irishmen and Harvard intellectuals, and nice old ladies who lived on the wrong side of Beacon Hill. Often it went off without any fisticuffs, but every so often heckling would lead to riot, and skulls would be broken indiscriminately, adding quite a bit to the intellectual atmosphere that always pervaded the hall.

Even when there was not any furniture hurling, there was lively swapping of mental rights and lefts and it was not a strange sight for some frock-coated lecturer to be quite taken down by some bearded and grease-stained scholar who had learned his economics and politics listening to the orators on Boston Common.

• • • •

IT was more like a town hall than Town Hall here is. It was run just like a New England town meeting was, with a moderator with a most forbidding countenance who allowed everybody to have his say. Thus it did not always run off as smoothly as Mr. Studebaker's excellently conducted affair, but often some fiery free-thinker would gibe the speaker of the evening into saying something that made all the front pages the next morning and caused certain of the Brahmins to shake their heads. It was all lots of fun, even on riot nights.

Now rioting at the Shoreham is not to be countenanced, I know. The chairs there are far too fragile for any decent kind of roughhousing, and beside it would disturb the guests sleeping in the lobby. But I do hope that the paneleers, to whom is intrusted the task of heckling the speakers, will be a little rougher this year than last. Only once did the black ties and the barebacks so forget their gentility as to boo. That was when poor Lewis Corey had pushed his way to the hotel through the maze of limousines paraded on Woodley road to tell the audience that capitalism was on the decline.

• • • •

IN THE course of his lecture he mentioned Russia quite often, amid the deep silence that greeted his jeremiad. Finally the paneleers set out to squelch him. It looked for a moment as if there was going to be some fun, for here and there a red menace had crept in to the room, intent upon booing the capitalistic agents on the platform, but the defenders of the status quo won out in the end, if I remember right, when one red-faced capitalist arose, switched his tails, and bellowed at poor Mr. Corey, "Why don't you go back where you came from?"

That was the nearest Town Hall ever came to disorder. I hope the paneleers think up some better questions this year.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Scenario for Quintuplets.

("Quintuplets Signed for Full Length Movie with Dr. Dafoe."—headline.)

1. To strains from Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" Ernest Dionne and his sweetheart Ovila are shown walking beside a rippling brook. The young lovers pause and gaze into each other's eyes. He proposes marriage. She asks, "Can you support a family?" He replies, "Two can live as cheap as one." She replies, "Who said anything about two?"

2. She accepts him. In the wedding scene the village pastor forgets the groom's name. "What was that name?" he asks. "Dionne," replies the groom. "Devon," nods the rector. "No," insists the groom, "Dionne!" He has to spell it for him. (This is the last time the name will sound unfamiliar to anybody.)

3. Flashes of the Dionne cottage. The young bride is knitting. She is very lonely. John has become indifferent. He keeps late hours. It distresses her. She breaks into tears. He asks, "Darling, what's the matter?" She holds up three tiny garments which she has knitted. He swoons. (This shows they are both wrong.)

• • • •

4. Dr. Dafoe's house. The doctor is shown driving into the barn in a buggy. The horse is so tired he can hardly make it. The doctor is pretty weary, too. This is their sixth 35-mile trip that day at $2 a visit.

5. The Dafoe living room. The doc picks up a newspaper and reads an item where New York baby specialists get $250 down before they will listen to details. He feels pretty futile.

6. The Dafoe barn. The horse can't sleep. It is extremely nervous. It paws the stall and whinnies. It seems to sense something unusual. And it's darned right.

7. Back to the Dafoe living room. The phone rings.

"Is this Dr. Dfoe?"

"Who wants him?"

"This is a patient speaking."

"How far away?"

"About 18 miles."

"Just a minute; I'll see if he's in."

Note: It's the doctor on the phone all the while but he's no fool. He has to consider wear and tear on his horse.)

8. Flash showing Dr. Dafoe and his horse and buggy tearing out of the driveway.

9. The horse and buggy in a race with five storks.

10. Thrilling race up hills, down hills, across swollen streams and around corners at top speed.

11. The old standby scene where the doctor, the storks and a railroad train near a grade crossing at the same moment. A collision seems certain. The storks get across the tracks, but the train blocks the horse and buggy.

12. The chase is resumed. Police sirens roar. (They don't make sense but directors insist on 'em in any pursuit scenes.)

13. Dionne home. The storks arrive. The doctor arrives.

14. Close-up of Mrs. Dionne in a Louise XIV bed.

15. A room in the Dionne cottage with Papa Dionne pacing the floor. A nurse comes out, smiles and says, "It's a girl."

16. Another nurse comes out and says, "It's a girl."

17. A third nurse comes out and says, "It's a girl."

18. Papa Dionne, dazed: "Am I hearing echoes?"

19. Two more nurses come out and say, "Well, this time it's a girl." Papa swoons.

Finale: An old servant rushes into the room, sees Papa Dionne on the floor, shakes him and cries, "Quick! Get a doctor!"

Papa Dionne: I just got a doctor.

Servant: I know it. Now you've He's all in!

(There is a heavy thud outside. Papa Dionne throws open the door and sees Dr. Dafoe's horse prostrate in the yard.)

Daddy Dionne: And I'll have to get one for the horse!

(Fade-out to "Rock-a-Bye Baby" and flashes from next week's pictures, "Broadway Love" and "She Done Him Wrong.")

Fixing the Blame.

The depression cost business $26,000,000,000. Well, I guess we'll have to charge it to prophets and bosses.

A Film of Fearful and Mighty Power Has Been Born of "Mutiny on the Bounty"

Brutal Tale of Sea Possesses Epic Grandeur

Cast Does Flawless Work; More About 'Waltz;' Theater Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

To Frank Lloyd seems to fall the directorial distiction of making most of the cinema's thundering dramas of the sea.

A little over ten years ago it was he who galvanized Rafael Sabatini's coruscating drama of the corsairs, "The Sea Hawk," into a model of maritime melodrama, with the late Milton Sills in the title role.

A little later he wielded the megaphone over "The Divine Lady," the romantic biography of Admiral Lord Nelson, in which Victor Varconi and Corinne Griffith were the pictured stars, and in which the hero of Trafalgar cut loose some mighty broadsides, and now, with Clark Gable and Charles Laughton in the costellar roles, and Franchot tone and a lusty cast in support, he caps the climax of his achievement on the high seas in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's utterly stupendous production of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

When the drama desks of the Capital viewed this widely discussed picture in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, they gazed for a solid two and a quarter hours upon a succession of the most amazingly realistic scenes of adventure, brutality, romance and retribution ever pictured on the rolling decks of a storm-tossed square-rigger, captained by a beetling brute with a pervert's lust for persecution.

Is Faithful to Book.

"Mutiny on the Bounty," to those who have read the book, will seem less an adaptation than a literal translation, page by page, of the James Norman Hall-Charles Nordhoff semi-historical fiction into the vivid terms of celluloid.

The film follows the printed story with extraordinary fidelity until the very end, where something of "Men Against the Sea" has been brought into the tale and the drama's denouement given a slightly different twist than occurred in the book to bring about vindication for Midshipman Roger Byam, falsely accused of participation in the mutinous action that set Capt. Bligh of H. M. S. Bounty and a handful of his faithful men adrift in a small boat in an unknown ocean to suffer through endless days of mental and phycical torture.

Those who have read the book, furthermore, will be aware that this rigid adherence to its text spells an exquisite and incessant brutality.

Remarking this circumstance to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer official when the film was put in production, he admitted to me that "Mutiny on the Bounty" could not be anything else but brutal and keep faith with the book. That is wholly true. It is no less true that the picture has managed to keep a minute and implicit faith with the book. It is brutal. At times it is hideously so. But—as was also true of the book—it never fails to exert a gripping and inescapable fascination, a fascination that so completely transcends the petty artificialities of trumped-up melodrama as to lend this subject something of epic quality that will appeal no less to feminine audiences than to male.

An Interval of Tranquillity.

Separating the two divisions of the story pitched upon the murderous highway of the open sea is a considerable sequence dedicated to the picturesque and tranquil isle of the kindly Tahitians, leading their restful and untrammeled lives in a pristine and beautiful natural paradise. This idyllic interval serves to point by contrast the hideous villainies with which Capt. Bligh paved the way to his ostensible destruction.

Beyond this bird's-eye view of a picture that must inevitably take its place among the monumental productions of its day there is no intention to set down a formal and itemized review of "Mutiny on the Bounty" at this time.

There is a great deal that might be said of the surprisingly able performances of those cast in the roles of the weather-beaten seadogs making up the Bounty's crew, of the uncanny resourcefulness revealed by Director Lloyd in his use of ship's rigging and expert photography from unsecustomed angles as helpful aids to drama, of the ingenuous charm of the native Polynesians employed in the Tahiti episodes of the story, but all this will keep until Saturday.

The present purpose does not extend beyond the modest aim to convey the idea that "Mutiny on the Bounty" is a whale of a picture—a Leviathan of the leaping tintypes that will haunt the memory for days after it has been witnessed.

Incidentally, this fellow Frank Lloyd, who makes all the big ones on the so-called bounding main, also is the chap who made "Cavalcade."

"Cavalcade" was a pretty good picture, too!

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, reports with a pride as prodigious and as pardonable as Col. Angie Ratto's, of the Palace, that his house staff also registered a 100 per cent pledge to the Community Chest on the first day of its current drive for subscriptions. Nice going.

Manager Meakin also rises to the point that the old Manassa Mauler, Jack Dempsey himself, will appear on the stage at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. on Saturday of this week, November 16, and speak for about ten minutes each time on the benefits of physical training and one thing and another, including, no doubt, some slight mention of the wholesomeness of the Jack Dempsey chocolate bar, the royalties from which are deposited in a bank each week to the credit of his small daughter.

It is not fisticuffing that brings the former champ to Washington this time, but a food show. It is through the courtesy of the committee in charge that he will be permitted to make the two appearances at Keith's.

That "Waltz" Again.

There is so much that is superlative in the Max Gordon production of "The Great Waltz," now at the National, that it is virtually impossible to cover it adequately at a single sitting—especially with a midnight deadline nudging one uncomfortably both fore and aft.

Skipping lightly over the unusual size of the company as something that is more or less taken as a matter of course, the rapidity with which scenes are changed on the revolving stage in plain view of the audience is an item vastly in the operetta's favor. Indeed, the Big Garden and the Little Garden chase each other about so speedily at times that it almost gives the impression of sweeping cast and chorus off the stage.

Then there is that fireworks display in the second act. This ordinarily would be looked upon as the grand climax of any spectacular production, but it is so entirely incidental in the present instance, and is so overpowered by the magnitude and magnificence of the ballroom scene that closes the music play, that its intricacy and cleverness are all but lost on an audience just a little bewildered by the kaleidoscope that Mr. Gordon and his associates have contrived.

A Smooth Performance.

And I am not one who finds a great deal at which to carp in the manner in which the involved mechanics of the first night's performance were applied.

It was a remarkably smooth projection of a scene of tremendous complexity. There probably were not many out front Monday night who knew that the electricians and stage crew had worked continuously for 28 hours to insure a praiseworthy Washington premiere. Their efforts were rewarded by what seems to be a practically complete success.

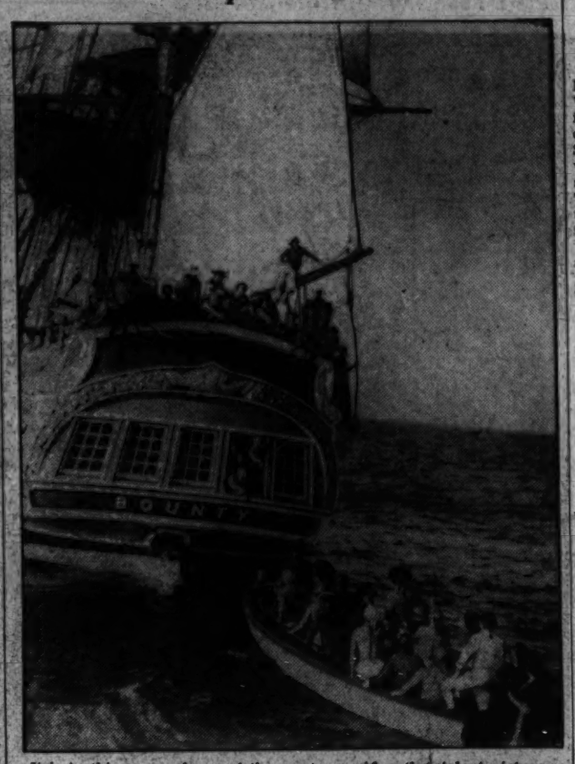
That the capacity audience did not feel that it had been duped by a misfit production and faulty performance was attested with some eloquence by the spontaneous ovation it accorded the players upon the fall of the final curtain.

Those who have contemplated a visit to the National this week may make it with the full assurance that they will be rewarded by an evening in the theater that has hardly been paralleled locally within the memory of this generation.

"The Great Waltz" is more completely comprehensible in the National Theater than it was to any of those who sat back of the first eight or ten rows in Radio City's vaunted—and vaulted—Central Theater in New York. Ask anybody.

One of the casualties of Monday's midnight rush in these columns was failure to mention that the Kathi Lanner, who is the premiere danseuse that leads the ballets in "The Great Waltz," is impersonated by Vivien Fay, a graceful, young woman richly endowed with the Terpsichorean talents of a born ballerina. It would be a difficult task to choose any member of the Albertina Rasch corps de ballet who is not so blessed. They are an especially well-schooled group of dancers, shown off to particular advantage by Hassard Short's inspired lighting.

When the Captain Hated the Sea



It is in this scene of one of the most magnificently violent pictures ever made that the insufferable Capt. Bligh, of H. M. S. Bounty, and a small band of followers are set adrift in a small boat on 3,500 miles of unknown ocean. Never before in the history of the cinema has so much brutal, yet fascinating, action been crammed into a single film as is encountered in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's staggering production of "Mutiny on the Bounty," opening Friday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. It is a "must" on any list.

The Good Samaritans.

Through the courtesy of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers' interests in Washington; Harry E. Lohmeyer and others of his associates, The Good Samaritans, Inc., 638 D street northwest, will be the beneficiary of two special benefit performances at the Tivoli and Avalon theaters on Saturday morning, November 30, at 9:30 o'clock.

The chief feature of the program at the Tivoli will be Shirley Temple in "Curly Top;" at the Avalon, the same diminutive star in "The Little Colonel." Each bill will be augmented by that perennial favorite, "The Three Little Pigs," a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy and an Our Gang comedy. A uniform admission charge of 25 cents will be levied.

Miss Mae Helm, assistant corporation counsel and member of the board of directors of The Good Samaritans, is chairman of the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, as vice chairman. Frank Buckley, attorney; Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the District Federation of Businessmen's Associations, and Elaine Hartley Levine are among the members of the committee.

Mrs. George E. Lorenz is chairman of the ticket committee, assisted by Mrs. James M. Doran, Miss Doris Gould Fowler, Mrs. John E. Fowler, Miss Helen Tewkesbury, Miss Betty Smith and Mrs. N. Graham Fountian.

Recipes-for-Health Note.

At that food show Mr. Dempsey is to attend I sincerly trust that if they have any of that piscatorial salad base, or sandwich spread, they will have the good judgment not to refer to it as Tunney fish!

While the Camera Isn't Looking.

Hollywood, Nov. 13.

Mae West's car is generally parked outside the door of the sound stage on which she is working. It isn't difficult to know her car, for she has her name printed on the cushions.

• • • •

Ruby Keeler and Paul Draper have been practicing dance routines for Ruby's new flicker, "Colleen," for with the brand of dancing in pictures now Ruby will really have to hoof. Leslie Howard, between shots, leaves "The Petrified Forest" set and goes to watch the dancing. He tries to do a few steps himself.

• • • •

Big Hollywood scene: Marlene Dietrich and Josef von Sternberg driving up to the out-of-town newsstand in his auto and stopping to purchase papers.

• • • •

Know where you can find the largest collection of chorines and show girls? Not on the set of any musical flicker, but at Harry Richman's house. He has rented a large house in Beverly Hills, and it is the gathering place even while Harry is on the set working. This is the Club Richman in Hollywood, and it's probably more crowded than the one on Broadway.

• • • •

Ernest Lubitsch likes to go dancing at the Club Trocadero, but no matter what the tempo of the music is, Ernest always dances a waltz.

• • • •

Darryl Zanuck is considering remaking the flicker, "It," with Clara Bow in the role that made her famous. Metro also has the story under consideration as a vehicle for Jean Harlow.

• • • •

Helen Vinson speaks with a soft Southern accent, and this makes it more startling when you are visiting in her apartment and offer her a cigarette. Miss Vinson may refuse the cigarette, saying: "I prefer to smoke my pipe now." For Helen Vinson does smoke a pipe occasionally.

• • • •

Mary Pickford has her new shingle up at the United Artists studio, which tells all who pass that she is now a producer.

• • • •

Bing Crosby is the only actor with two separate dressing rooms. He has one along "Actor's Row" at Paramount, and another in the writers' building at that studio. The office in the writers building has this printed on the door, "Bing Crosby, Ltd.," and is strictly for business.

• • • •

They say it occurred while they were preparing the scenario of "So Red the Rose." A writer was called in to do some additional dialogue and told to give his script the feeling of the tradition of the South when the South was fighting the "East."

• • • •

Dick Powell, when he records a difficult song, brings his singing teacher on the set to listen to him. If the teacher is satisfied with the way Powell does the number, Dick isn't greatly concerned about the opinion of the others.

• • • •

Lina Basquette is in Hollywood looking the town over, and she has confided to friends that she intends to get a divorce from Teddy Hayes.

• • • •

A prominent leading man was trying to impress a new actress, who is playing in a flicker with him. Despite all he said, the actress simply couldn't be annoyed. The actor, frankly, was puzzled and finally spoke to her like one of his press clippings, saying: "Come on, like a he-man for a change." The actress quickly answered: "I'm more of a he-man than you are."

• • • •

Charlie Chapin insists that he wants to keep the story of "Modern Times" and the gags in this flicker a secret. He has been afraid that he would see them in other pictures before his is released. Yet, Chaplin keeps inviting writer friends into the projection room to see the flicker, and there have been more articles in magazines telling about "Modern Times" than any other flicker this season. One of the better gags in the flicker concerns Chaplin's efforts to get himself arrested. He makes many efforts, but can't. Then he sees a large plate glass window. He picks up a brick and waits for the policeman to approach. Then Chaplin hurls the brick through the window. The policeman walks by not disturbing Chaplin. As the cop walks by, the sign "House Wrecking Crew at Work" is seen.

Broadway

Thinking Out Loud.

New York, Nov. 13.

AT the House of Morgan, Helen Morgan is singing her laments . . . At the Biltmore, Estelle Taylor is singing Solitude" . . . At the Savoy Room, blonde June Knight is wiggling her shapely chassis as an accompaniment to lighter lyrical motifs . . . At Mon Paris, Cobina Wright, of the social set, is rehearsing for her vocal premiere . . . At the Hollywood, the shapely Frazee Sisters are harmonizing . . . At the Paradise, the Saxon Sisters are reaching high rhythm notes . . . At the Versailles, the French chanteuse, Lucienne Boyer, charms New York audiences with songs in French, although most of the audience cannot understand the languags . . . A greater tribute to her art . . . There is a rich field for girl singers on Broadway, always has been and always will be . . . The salaries range from $200 per week up to $3,500, if you have something different to sell.

• • • •

Jean Sargent and Greg Mangin, the net champ, are a new twosome . . . Aside to Pat Humphries and Jerie Higgins: Thanks, my chicadees, for timing your elopement so that it hit our 2:30 a. m. edition . . . And good luck . . . Jimmy Walker and Betty have been quieter than mice since arriving here . . . The Harry Anderson Sir Stork report was wrong . . . Betty Jane Cooper, one of this column's proteges, goes into "Scandals" . . . Kay Picture may team with the Brothers Cooper for vaudeville . . . Fred Bachler and Betty Douglas, the model, are back together again . . . Margaret Rawlings in "Parnell" is in the Katharine Cornell key, but operacts just a mite . . . The Black Cat with a sepian show, enlivens the Village night club circuit . . . Add curios: Pittsburgh's Mayor McNair, seeking to obtain funds, is playing a week in vaudeville at $1,500.

• • • •

In the past week, I've read three books that held my interest: Joseph Pollard's legal appraisal of Mr. Justice Cardozo; George Britt's biographical estimate of Frank A. Munsey, and John K. Winkler's story of the du Pont Dynasty . . . Munsey rolled up $40,000,000 from the time he started out as a telegrapher in his home town, Lisbon Falls, Me. . . . The du Ponts, tracing back to the days of Marie Antoinette, have rolled up $5,000,000,000 . . . Mr. Justice Cardozo, now sitting on the bench of the United States Supreme Court, unlike these business goliaths, has not amassed great sums of money . . . Yet from a study of the three books on Munsey, the du Ponts and Cardozo, you come away with the impression that the great American jurist, penniless in comparison to these others, has enriched himself and his country to a far greater extent . . . Brilliant, thoughtful, human to a vast degree, leaning more to an interpretation of the spirit of the law than its letter, Cardozo's career is as rich and deeply toned as a benediction . . . The Jewish race can well be proud of this great mentality.

• • • •

Winkler's study of the du Pont family is more engrossing than any fiction . . . Irenee du Pont, with a thorough French training in the mixing of saltpeter, charcoal and sulphur, principal ingredients of gunpowder, started the vast powder enterprise quite accidentally in 1800 . . . He and a companion, hunting near Bergen Point, N. J., ran out of gunpowder and had to go to a Jersey country store to replenish their supply . . . The powder was of inferior quality, the price was high . . . Irenee learned that there was only one great powder factory, at Frankfort, Pa., employing 16 men . . . Thus started the du Pont dynasty of powder, the mushroom growth of the prolific family supplying the manpower, and each generation developing geniuses in chemistry and finance . . . Despite intermarriage, the blood lines did not weaken or disintegrate . . . Other great families, seeking to protect their wealth by intermarriage, have not been so fortunate.

• • • •

Frank Munsey's biography explains the mania for newspaper mergers that dynamited Park Row . . . In the magazine field, in which he excelled, Munsey merged weaker magazines to bring about a concentration of effort and to prevent overlapping . . . In his chain-store grocery business, Munsey became devoted to the chain idea, which he later tried unsuccessfully to graft on the newspaper business . . . He confessed later that groceries and newspapers were not alike, his experiments with a chain store of newspapers convincing him of the futility of applying similar principles of cost and marketing . . . Britt's cold analysis of a colder man could have been written with an icepick . . . But reading the incredible story of the young Maine telegrapher who brought New York to its knees, you are stricken at his will power . . . Broke, hungry, his system weakened by work, Munsey never abandoned his dream of a magazine that would undersell the popular magazines of the day—and clicked . . . Those early, desperate struggles froze all the youth out of him, and his failure to marry added the loneliness that completed the congealing process.

• • • •

Perhaps some of Rudy Vallee's success can be explained through the medium of the actors' benefit show, which he staged at the Majestic on Sunday night . . . Benefits are always hit-or-miss affairs, with performers waiting hours in the wings to go on . . . Vallee systematized the whole thing, with a carefully prepared time chart indicating the exact time each of us was to go onstage . . . Applied to his own career, this infinite capacity for taking pains has grossed over $1,000,000.

Paper Is Used for Rugs, Strange as It May Seem

Strange as it may seem, floor rugs have been crocheted out of crepe paper. The paper is first cut into two-inch-wide strips, then twisted and crocheted with a large hook. Oval or circular rugs are made, in the old-fashioned early American hit-or-miss pattern, using strips of different but harmonizing hues. When finished, a thin coat of white shellac makes the rug easy to clean and surprisingly durable.

'Doctor' Turns Cast-Off Shoes Into New Ones

Summer Sandals Can Be Renovated for Duty as Evening Slippers.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S a shoe doctor in town with a "Midas" touch. You take him your white kid sandals, or light summer shoes of any type, and at short notice he can turn them to gold, silver, or bronze.

There's a saving in this. Those summer sandals might look a bit down at the heel. Certainly the white is the worst for soil. Next year they'd have to go for second or third best, but if you have them doctored up they'll make an excellent pair of evening slippers.

But this shoe doctor is adept in doing more more than "Midas-ing" shoes. He can widen them, lengthen them, cut down vamps to relieve unbearable cutting and binding at instep, and build up "turned out" shoes that have lost their original shape and comfort.

Remember that a few alterations may make all the difference in the world between high spirits and low and between shoe shabbiness and smartness.

Nonspillable Perfume.

THOSE OF YOU who have carried a perfume flacon in your purse to have gone a-traveling with one in your suitcase only to experience an embarassing and scented "spill" should give a hearty welcome to the cream perfume. More properly, concentrated perfume. This comes in a small colorful container and is in a creamy form that can not spill. You rub a bit on your hand, or the lobe of your ear and it imparts a true and lasting fragrance.

Naturally perfume in this form lasts much longer than any other for the simple reason that it can not evaporate. It comes in three fragrances, "Charazade," gardenia and wisteria. You may buy $1's worth for 25 cents.

Cucumber Cleansing Lotion.

THE YOUNG WOMAN who hasn't time to use creams and lotions by the dozens to cleanse and care for her skin will find a certain cucumber cleansing lotion exactly what she needs. If she works in an office and has to snatch time to keep herself beautified, she ought to be enthusiastic over this preparation. She can keep it in her desk drawer, and when she needs it, apply it with a cotton pad. Immediately all the make-up and surface dirt peels off and her skin is left clean and glowing for powder and rouge.

This cucumber lotion is cool and refreshing. It's inspiring to look at too for it's a smooth, creamy liquid that makes you think of white icing.

Monogrammed Stationery.

IF SOMEBODY were to tell you that he had a very nice box of stationery with your monogram on it and that it, plus the die cost him $5.50, but he would give it to you for $2.95, wouldn't you think you were pretty lucky? And wouldn't you be pretty lucky? And—as a matter of fact—aren't you?

A downtown store—and one you know you can depend on—offers you a stunning box of stationery, including note sheets and letter sheets and 48 envelopes. They will engrave your initials on this, and then hand the die over to you to keep for future use. You pay them the conservative sum of $2.95. They are giving you an actual $5.50 value.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

VARIETY MENU for TODAY

By Dorothea Duncan.

MILD autumn weather makes it almost necessary to serve meals with a hint of spring in their make-up. The summer scheme of one hot dish a meal is a good one to follow at this time of the year. Luncheon may consist of a hot soup—a cream soup is ideal because it may contain vegetables as well as milk—a crisp salad, a dessert and beverage.

Chilly fruit cups will be more popular for dinner for a while than soups. The main course, however, should be hot, and can be followed by a salad of greens with an interesting dressing and a cold dessert.

Today's dinner menu suggests a deep dish lamb pot pie with vegetables. This dish is inexpensive as well as appetizing and is a boon to the busy housewife in that the main part of the preparation can be accomplished in the morning, leaving little kitchen work for the afternoon. The dessert suggested also can be prepared in the morning.

The deep dish lamb pot pie is merely a lamb stew with carrots, onions and potatoes. The meat may be abreast of lamb and is more attractive if boned before cooking. Make the stew as usual, but make the gravy a little thicker than usual so when serving it will not run all over the plates. Place stew and gravy in an oven-resistant casserole and top with pie pastry. Bake in a quick oven until the pastry is crisp and golden brown.

End of "Spoils System" In Government Urged

Chairman of the Department of Government the National League of Women Voters, Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, of Indianapolis, points out the responsibility of women in helping to improve standards of personnel in Government service.

Vote League Leader, Here for Meeting of Directors, Sees Need for Awakening of Americans to Their Responsibility.

THE HOUSEWIFE who turns on the spigot in her sink to wash her dishes, the mother who sends her children to school, and the business woman who goes to work each morning make innumerable contacts with local, State and Federal governments each day. In other words, government touches and controls in some way every man, woman and child in the country.

Then why are so many women—and men, for that matter—indifferent to the type of persons in Government service? Why do Mr. and Mrs. John Jones go on year after year paying taxes for salaries of "deserving Democrats" or "deserving Republicans" who procure jobs through political pull without regard to qualification and training? And what can women do to help supplant the "spoils system" with the "career system" in Government positions?

These questions were answered yesterday by Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, of Indianapolis, who is in Washington to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the League of Women Voters, relative to the launching of the league's campaign for improving personnel in Government service.

Need For Awakening Seen.

Chairman of the department of Government of the league, Mrs. Greenough believes "both men and women must be awakened to their sense of individual responsibility toward the Government, must use their vote and their voice in improving standards of selection of Government workers.

She believes the indifference of the average man and woman lies chiefly in the widespread belief that individuals cannot do much to improve conditions, that the conviction of one woman or one man could do little to uproot workings of highly organized political machines. "Yet if every woman could be convinced it is her duty to take a stand for better personnel in Government service, a more efficient, and more economically run government of local, State and Federal affairs would be the result," Mrs. Greenough said.

She pointed out that "a skilled, trained employe can do the work of two or three employes who are appointed solely because of political affiliations."

Tradition, too, is somewhat responsible for the existing state of affairs, Mrs. Greenough thinks. "People of a country that has, since the time of Andrew Jackson, selected much of its personnel according to the to-the-victor-belongs-the-spoils idea are prone to develop a lazy-minded attitude toward Government," she said, "yet tradition does not relieve us of responsibility. Every woman who realizes this can do much to help achieve better government. In the first place she can support qualified candidates for elective offices, knowing that competent officials insist upon qualified appointees in order that their offices can be properly administered. Secondly, each woman can keep informed—either on her own initiative or through an organization—about how appointive jobs are discharged. She also can insist on the appointment of persons who make careers of Government service rather than those who accept temporary jobs dependent upon the results of elections."

REP. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers Noted for Her Boston Brown Bread.

By Pattie Ellicott.

As Thanksgiving approaches New England recipes naturally come to mind. Chief among these is the Boston brown bread whose flavor seems to be of lasting memory to those born north of the Mason and Dixon line. There are certain foods which demand as their proper accompaniment the use of brown bread—chief among these being the baked bean and the cod.

In Washington those fortunate enough to be entertained at the hospitable home of Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, often are treated to Boston brown bread of which she is a splendid judge. Representative Rogers, who has been called "The Angel of Walter Reed" due to her ministrations to the wounded veterans there as a Gray Lady and even before that group was formed, is the champion walker among official women of the Capital.

When Boston brown bread is served at her home it is generally made from the following recipe.

Boston Brown Bread.

1½ cups cornmeal.
1½ cups graham flour
½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup shelled pecans,
1½ cups buttermilk or sour milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon shortening (melted)
¾ cup sirup.

Sift flour, cornmeal and salt together; add bran that remains in sifter from graham flour. Add soda to milk, then mix with flour. Add sirup and shortening. Stir in raisins and nuts. Beat a few moments, turn in well-greased pound baking powder cans, two-thirds full. Bake in moderate oven, 45 to 60 minutes. Do not put tops on cans.

When done, turn cans upside down and let bread sweat out. Stand loaves on end, cover with clean cloth, let cool gradually.

'Economy' Cottage On View at Show

$500 Home Part of N. Y. Institute Program.

A cottage containing four attractively furnished rooms and bath priced at $500 is being exhibited in New York as part of a program of the National Institute of Family Living, a newly formed organization of 100 women prominent in club activities. The purpose of the exhibition is to demonstrate how homes may be made pleasant even on a restricted income.

The cottage and its furnishings have been planned to show how low-cost equipment of good quality may be obtained in color harmony and the best of taste without going into debt. The price is on a scale which may be adjusted to fit various needs and incomes.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My husband and I are nearly 30 years of age, both college graduates, both from small towns, and have one child and a mother to support. After living in Washington for three years we find we are not able to save any money toward future protection, such as money for a home or insurance against sickness and death. Up to the present time it has not been necessary for us to buy any clothing. We have spent very little for amusements of any kind. We also find that we cannot afford the privilege of church fellowship. My husband's lodge dues are unpaid.

* * * *

I feel there must be something wrong. Will you please answer these questions for me: What would be considered a fair salary for an insurance adjuster with one of the strongest insurance companies in the world, when living in Washington? How much money should be expended for rent? How much for food and clothing? How much for church and charity? How much for amusements? DESPERATE.

Money Management.

DEAR DESPERATE: I could not possibly say, for I do not know, what would be considered a fair salary for an insurance adjuster with one of the strongest insurance companies in the world. As a matter of fact, I put your question to a representative of the Washington branch of such a company, who evaded answering it directly. I was told such salaries are fixed at the discretion of the officials of each company.

The Household Finance Corporation, 919 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., issues a series of booklets on "Money Management for Households," and I suggest you write asking for this material. On page 8 of its pamphlet on "Stretching the Dollar," this is said of rent: "Shelter demands a large slice of every family's income. As a general rule not more than one week's wages should go for rent each month." On page 16 it says of clothing: "The expenditure for clothing is so variable that the standard of about 15 per cent of the total income is merely a guide * * *"

Millinery for Evening Is Dictated by Fashion

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The prophets have it that soon an unadorned head will have a bleak and nude look of an evening. There's hardly a well-dressed head but goes in for some sort of adornment after dark. Whether it's a circlet of feathers . . . a Juliet cap or snood . . . an absurd velvet bow . . . or a wreath of leaves. These, of course, team up with handbags, and add a dash of spice to her night-life.

That bit of whimsy perched aloft on the lady's brow (at the upper right of our illustration) must be worn, needless to say, when she's in a gay mood—never when life seems serious.

There's much more dignity to that circlet of feathers sketched at the bottom of our illustration. It can be adjusted and swirled in different ways, too. Her bag, big enough for keys, powder, and "mad money," is of velvet, and matches the feathers. (The set sketched was deep purple).

Naive little caps of pearls, such as Juliet might have worn to captivate her Romeo, are topping many well coiffed heads this season, too. Some, like the one sketched at the upper left, are strewn with rhinestones, and the lady carries a rhinestone bag.

Juliet snoods are a bit more extreme. They sit on the back of the head, and are large enough to tuck in all the back hair.

Simple wreaths made of leaves—somewhat like the laurel wreaths of the ancient Greeks, turn out to look surprisingly 1935! Sometimes the leaves are made of gold or silver kid . . . sometimes of velvet in brilliant jewel colors. Such as emerald, sapphire, and ruby. And black, of course.

This season, there aren't just one or two successful evening fashions—but many! Out of the melee, we've selected three of the most popular fabrics for evening dresses, and suggested what color accessories to wear with each. Which useful information, together with actual samples of the fabrics, is contained in our leaflet: "Three Evening Favorites, and What to Wear With Them." Marriage Poll Gives Romance A Big Setback 56% of 18,000 Quizzed Name Love; Financial Security Second.

ROMANCE apparently has received a setback in a survey of prospective brides and bridegrooms made by the Marital Relations Institute of New York.

Eighteen thousand marriage license applicants in nine large cities were questioned. Of those replying to the question "Why are you marrying?" only 56 per cent said they were marrying for love. Financial security and a good home were second in importance among the reasons given. One hundred and nineteen men admitted marrying for economic security. One per cent of the applicants said they were marrying to bear children.

About 43 per cent of the brides said they expected to help support homes after marriage.

Few Expect Permanence.

Only 34 per cent said they expected their marriages to last forever. Fifteen per cent gave 20 years as their marriage expectation; 3 per cent, ten years; 24 per cent, seven years; 18 per cent, five years; 6 per cent, two years.

Asked what they expected of marriage, the applicants listed love and companionship, social prestige, emotional outlet, understanding and sympathy. Men in far greater numbers than women said they desired children.

"Why are you marrying?" was answered by fewer applicants than any other question submitted. Women were far more articulate than men in replying to all the questions.

Serious Condition May Result If Hemorrhoids Are Neglected

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MODESTY is a highly desirable quality; one to be cultivated—but what a delusion and a snare it proves to be when applied to things medical. There was a time when polite and cultured women would never dream of submitting to a physical examination by a male physician. Only to a limited extent does this unfortunate sentiment prevail today.

A great many individuals complain about hemorrhoids or piles when investigation reveals no trace whatsoever of rectal disease.

There are many symptoms in and about the rectum that are not related to hemorrhoids. Pain is often associated with fissures or cracks in the mucous membrane that may have resulted from constipation. Sometimes local ulcers or inflammatory areas exist in the lower intestine. Such conditions give rise frequently to abdominal cramps. Not infrequently inflammatory changes in the coccyx (the rudimentary tail bone) are responsible for pain.

Itching in the anal region is often understood to be a constant symptom of hemorrhoids. This condition, however, can be brought about by so many different factors that the rectum must be proved guilty before sentence is pronounced. If relief does not come with the observance of scrupulous cleanliness, parasites must be considered as well as some allergic irritation caused by food, clothing or soap.

Dilated hemorrhoidal veins are, however, a very real cause of trouble. They are enlargements of rather small veins in which blood has clotted, thus rendering the vessels useless. Sometimes these structures will absorb and hence cause negligible symptoms. But if they enlarge and protrude from the opening of the lower bowel they may become pinched by the sphincter muscles. As a result, ulceration and necrosis (destruction of tissue) may occur. Hemorrhoids are not difficult of removal unless they are infected, in which situation careful treatment is required before any surgical procedure is undertaken.

If rectal symptoms appear—discomfort, pain or bleeding—an examination is indicated at once. Temporary measures for relief are not advised, as neglect of disease signals from this area may permit the development of a cancerous condition to the point where surgery, X-ray and radium will be of no avail.

Seven Called '38 Eligibles In Maryland

Winebrenner List for Democratic Nomination Omits Conley.

Jackson, Ritchie Named in Talk to Women of Party.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 13.—Seven prominent Democrats were mentioned as eligible for Governor in 1938 by former Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3rd, of Frederick, in an address before the Washington County Women's Democratic Organization here tonight.

The group mentioned include Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Maryland National Committeeman Howard Bruce and former Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr.

Significantly missing was the name of Dr. Charles H. Conley, opponent of former Gov. Ritchie in the 1934 gubernatorial primary and arch rival of Winebrenner for party supremacy in Frederick County.

Suggesting that the Democratic Party in the State has benefited by the shake-up in administrations last year, the speaker asked "who entertains any serious doubt but that a Democratic administration will certainly follow?"

Three Qualifications.

Before naming the men he held eligible to carry the Democratic standards, Winebrenner laid down three qualifications. "He must be a man whose fidelity to party is beyond question, of such stature as appeals to the independent voters, and one 'whose sacred word is pledged reluctantly, but once given, is an obligation to the fulfillment of which he will admit there is no limitation or qualification.'"

In discussing the first qualification, Winebrenner said: "No man shall be honored with the leadership of the Democracy of Maryland whose party fealty is in the least questionable."

This remark was believed directed at Dr. Conley, who has been openly charged by Winebrenner with having supported the candidacy of Gov. Harry W. Nice in the general election a year ago.

Winebrenner recommended that those entering the political field cultivate three virtues—sportsmanship, equanimity and self-effacement. He lauded the National Administration and charged Gov. Nice with having praised President Roosevelt during his campaign for governor and in recent months attacking him because of his own Presidential ambitions. "Our people are not so benighted that they fail to see that the praise and criticism were both prompted by expediency rather than by conviction," he declared.

Campaign Promises Assailed.

Directing further criticism toward the Nice administration, Winebrenner said, "Nor will our people tolerate the making of political promises * * * when they are made with shameless disregard of either effort toward or hope of fulfillment. Who is there that fails to associate the late Republican State campaign with $2 tags, a catch-all promise made when it was known that it could not be fulfilled?

"How much sincerity is to be credited to a party and its leader who did not hesitate to exploit the misery of human beings who have seen their life savings swept away in improperly managed financial institutions by charging that the responsibility for these losses belonged to the opposite party, when he knew that such suffering was, unhappily, Nation-wide in its scope and came to pass when his own party was in power? And what has happened to that 'searching investigation' that was so solemnly promised to fix the responsibility for the 'ruin of thousands of depositors?'

"The Democratic Party is generically incapable of waging a negative war. It may be true that what the present Republican administration has done, and what it has left undone, will be sufficient in itself to win the next battle. But it is not enough. The Democratic Party must offer something more than a mere negation."

Relief Cash To Strikers Ends Dec. 1

Funds Will Be Paid Out as Long as Direct U.S. Aid Is Available.

Maryland Chiefs Forms Policy for Time When Jobs Are Offered.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 13.—Work-relief strikers in Allegany County will be kept on direct-relief rolls only as long as Federal direct-relief funds are available, the board of State aid and charities said today as it clarified its policy regarding the strikers.

Earlier in the day, Gov. Harry W. Nice announced that these men were being paid exclusively with State funds.

The statement was released in Cumberland by J. Milton Patterson, chairman of the Allegany County welfare board. The policy was announced by Samuel E. Shannahan, chairman of the board of State aid.

Shannahan Statement.

Shannahan's statement, as released by Patterson, said:

"Those individuals in Allegany County who have thus far refused to go to work on Works Progress Administration projects because of a conflict between the local laws and the security wage of the WPA shall be continued on relief from State funds in view of the fact that Federal funds cannot be used for this purpose, but only so long as State funds are augmented by Federal funds.

"After December 1 we will be compelled to discontinue relief to all able-bodied individuals who have been offered jobs on WPA and who have refused to accept employment, as we have already received notice that no further Federal funds for direct relief will be received after December 1. We will only have approximately $291,000 per month of State funds after December 1, which funds must of necessity be used for care of unemployables and those persons who cannot be absorbed by the WPA throughout the State."

Blow at Strikes.

The statement was seen by relief observers as removing one of the most dangerous potentialities of the strike situation. If relief had been indefinitely continued, it might encourage other strikes throughout the State, these observers held. If these strikes continued after the end of this month, when Federal funds are to be cut off, the responsibility for caring for the strikers would have fallen on the State.

A number of other developments marked the relief situation during the day. Among them were:

Cumberland People's Court upheld a law setting 50 cents per hour as the minimum wage on city projects.

Dryden wired Cumberland and Frostburg, where WPA strikes are going on, asking if they were prepared to go ahead with other projects.

Washington approved WPA projects costing $589,590, as well as $46,000 worth of jobs to be done by the State roads commission.

Test Suit Cited.

The Cumberland wage law was upheld in the case of Samuel McFarlane, who filed a test suit against the mayor and council. Mayor George W. Legge said an appeal would be filed. The suit directly involved the FPA strike.

Dryden's telegram to the Allegany County communities was in line with his policy of offering a job to every man on relief in the State. Strikers were called on jobs which had already started, but a number of others, approved but not begun were not affected.

Some officials, saw, however, that the telegrams would have the effect of defining county and city officials' attitude toward the WPA. If there is a willingness to go ahead with other projects, it may mean that the county people are anxious to transfer their relief burdens to Federal payrolls. If there is not such willingness, it may be an indication that all or most of the relief clients will remain on direct relief, paid by the Federal or State government as long as Federal funds are available and supported by State funds after that time.

Baltimore Trust Co. Stockholders Liable

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 13.—Circuit Court Judge Eugene O'Dunne today ordered enforcement of statutory liability against stockholders of the old Baltimore Trust Co.

He signed an order directing the receiver to collect the amounts and to sue for them if necessary. A total of 625,000 shares, with a par value of $10 each, is outstanding.

The judge's order pointed out that liabilities of the old trust company were considerably more than $8,250,000 in excess of assets. The stock assessment, if collected in full, would bring in $6,250,000, which still would not meet all liabilities.

Torch Murder Indictment May Name Woman

Officials Attack Defense Claim of Colored Boxer and Sister.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 13.—Blanche Smith, sister of Alfred Brown, 26-year-old colored prize fighter, may be indicted jointly with her brother in the murder of Manuel Silva Varela, 44-year-old Spaniard, in their Doubs home last Thursday, State's Attorney Sherman P. Powers and Sheriff Roy M. Hiltner intimated today.

Both officials indicated they thought the Smith girl, who has admitted she saw her brother strike the blow that killed Varela, had more interest in the slaying and burning of the body than either she or her brother have admitted.

The county officials expressed confidence the self-defense story offered by both Brown and his sister will be shattered. Sheriff Hiltner said he was called to the Doubs home several weeks ago to investigate a claim made by Varela that someone put glass in his food. At that time, the sheriff said, Brown made the boast that he would get possession of the house, which Mary Brown, Varela's common-law wife, was buying but which was in Varela's name.

Varela purchased the small tract and house several years ago, officials learned, and made payments for sometime to a Washington dealer. When he retired from his trade as ships carpenter, his wife obtained employment in Washington and has been making the payments since.

Brown and his sister, the county officials believe, resented the fact the property was being bought in Varela's name. The arguments over a chicken, which Brown and his sister said led to the fatal fight, merely served to bring the other differences to a head, they contend.

Both Brown and his sister will be questioned further before they face hte grand jury Monday. The sistre, whose statement led to the confession of Brown in Rockville last Sunday, is being held in the local jail as a material witness. Officials indicated they will place formal charges against her if necessary to hold her.

Sholtz Raps Nice on Call For Parleys

But Marylander Denies Move Would Seek More U. S. Aid.

Governor of Connecticut Backs Proposal for Re lief Talks.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 13.—Gov. Harry W. Nice's proposed Governors' relief conference would plan State action and not press for continuance of Federal direct relief, the Governor said today as his proposal received approbation from another State executive.

Gov. Nice defined the purpose of the proposed immediate session of Governors in commenting on a statement by Gov. David Sholtz of Florida. The proposal has been sent to the executive committee of the Governors' Conference, of which Gov. Sholtz is a member.

The Florida executive said that it was "strange" that a call for "large sums for relief" should come from a "distinguished Republican leader."

Gov. Nice said that Gov. Sholtz "misses the point entirely." His session would plan concerted action by the States to meet the relief crisis from their own resources, Nice said. The possible "serious consequences" of ending relief, he declared, were recognized by the Federal Government.

As proof of this statement, he pointed to the activities of a special Federal agent in western Maryland. This representative has been gathering a consensus from all classes as to the advisability of continuing relief.

In the face of Gov. Sholtz's disapproval, Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut approved the Nice suggestion. He sent to Gov. Nice a copy of his telegram to President Roosevelt on the question of cutting off relief to transients. Gov. Cross said he did not believe that this problem could be handled by the States acting separately. In reply, Gov. Nice wired him that he agreed that all consequences of the ending of direct relief should be handled jointly by the States.

Lifer's 31st Plea For Writ Rejected

Habeas Corpus Petition Is Returned to Berman.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 13.—Louis Berman, Marylander serving a life sentence for murder, today lost his thirty-first attempt to gain freedom through a writ of habeas corpus.

Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson of the First Judicial Circuit, rejected Berman's latest petition today on grounds the ppers requesting a hearing were not sworn to. The petition, filed with Ira D. Turner, clerk of the court, was returned to Berman.

Berman was convicted in 1928 in Baltimore for the slaying of his attorney, Clifton Brown.

Anne Arundel WPA Projects Held Up by Lack of Labor

Only 64 Working on Four Jobs Needing 181 Men, Engineer Says.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—Failure to obtain the number of relief workers needed is holding up WPA projects in Anne Arundel County and has caused some discussion of the possibility that the entire program may have to be abandoned.

John A. Bromley, county roads engineer, cited four county WPA projects where a total of 181 men were needed, but where only 64 supplied by the relief authorities were working. Many of the approved county projects have not been started, he said.

Bromley pointed out that the Dorsey-Jessups farm to Market road, consisting of about 3 miles of highway to be relocated and graveled required a force of 50 men.

"This project was started about two weeks ago," he said. "Only five men were ordered out for the work. Of these three reported, but one left because of poison ivy. Now we have two at work under a foreman.

"In the fifth district, we asked for 50 men for the improvement of the 5-mile stretch of the Patapsco Station-Dorsey road. The relief authorities assigned 25 men. These reported but for one reason or another the force has dwindled to 12.

"On another project, the 2½-mile stretch of road from Severna Park to Benfield, we asked for 58 men. We got 26 the first day and 8 since."

Churches Defrauded In Pleas for Aid

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 13.—Frank Brock is serving 90 days in jail on a charge of defrauding three Danville churches. He appeared before the congregations and said in two instances that his mother had been run over by a bread truck at Greenville, S. C., and was dying in a hospital, that he was without funds and asked that a collection be taken. At the third church witnesses said Brock claimed his father had been injured in Washington and was near death.

He obtained $6.49 from the Pentecostal Holiness Church, $4.10 from the Schoolfield Baptist Church and an undisclosed sum from Calvary Baptist Church, where he took up the collection himself.

U. S. Scientists List Lecture By Harold Urey

Nobel Prize Winner Will Address Academy on Water Varieties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Nov. 13.—Dr. Harold Clayton Urey, of Columbia University, noted physicist and Nobel Prize winner, has been designated to give the only public lecture during the meeting of the National Academy of Sciences at the University of Virginia Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Urey, who won the Nobel award for his researches in heavy water, will speak Monday night in Cabell Hall on "Varieties of Water and Their Separation." He obtained a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of California, and taught at Johns Hopkins University before going to Columbia.

The annual fall session will open with an address of welcome by President John Lloyd Newcomb. A response will be made by Dr. Frank R. Lillie, of the University of Chicago, president of the academy.

Morning and afternoon scientific sessions will be held Monday and uesday, and the convention will close at the end of the Wednesday mornings meeting. The program calls for the presentation of 50 papers on the latest discoveries in various fields of scientific research. Twelve of these have been compiled by University of Virginia faculty members and research workers.

Topics range from highly technical discussions of problems in physics, chemistry, astronomy, mathematics and anatomy to studies of the nature of rust resistance in beans.

Foiled in Effort To Break Jail, Man Is Indicted

Harford Grand Jury Frees Manning, Committed Through Mistake.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Nov. 13.—Two indictments were returned today by the Harford County grand jury against Ester Bryson, colored, who recently attempted an escape from the county jail.

One charged criminal assault upon a 13-year-old white girl. The attack allegedly occurred at a farm for underprivileged girls near here. Bryson was an attendant in the farm kitchen farm.

The other indictment was for assault with intent to kill Sheriff Granville C. Boyle, who frustrated the man's attempted jail break last month.

Adjourning after a three-day session, the grand jury handed down only seven indictments, the smallest number in years.

Harry Manning, race track follower who was sent to the House of Correction through a mistake and who later was returned to the jail here, finally won his freedom today. The grand jury failed to indict him on either of the charges of vagrancy or malicious destruction of property.

Neither did the grand jury indict Frank Kelly on charges of malicious destruction of property. He is serving time in the house for vagrancy. It was Kelly with whom Magistrate Thelma Whitney confused Manning. Commitment papers to the house bore Manning's name instead of Kelly's and he had to resort to habeas corpus proceedings to be transferred from there to the county jail.

Charge Filed In Slaying Of Spinster

Noah Kolbfleisch Held in Shotgun Slaying of Miss Pysell.

Nephew of Victim Faces Quiz Saturday; Guilt Is Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Nov. 13.—Noah Kolbfleisch, 30-year-old man, today was charged with the murder of his 60-year-old aunt, Miss Ella Pysell, with whom he made his home at McHenry, near here.

He probably will be given a preliminary hearing before a magistrate Saturday.

Announcement of the charge came as a surprise move a few minutes before Kolbfleisch was to have received a hearing on a petition for writ of habeas corpus. The charge precluded the hearing on the petition.

Kolbfleisch had been held in jail here with four others, also residents of Miss Pysell's home, since a few hours after the shooting last Wednesday night. The elderly spinster was felled by a charge from a shotgun as she was washing dishes. The shot was fired through a window.

The warrant was issued by Magistrate Charles F. White and the charge was preferred by Sheriff Clarence Spear.

Kolbfleisch, through his attorney, denied the charge.

Recounts New Idea For Identifying Football Stars.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—It was three-quarters of an hour before the big game, and the coaching staff of College State University was beside itself with worry and anxiety. In 45 minutes they would face their oldest rivals, Polynormal, and Joe Rackham, big "Butch" Rackham, their star halfback, was missing.

The team was dressed and ready to take the field for practice, but Butch Rackham's uniform, with the big "05," his distinguishing number on back and chest, still hung limp and untenanted in his locker. Butch, the great, who fired forward passes that stayed glued to the fingers of the receivers, who could kick to the coffin corner from his own goal line, who ran and twisted, who blocked and tackled. Butch was missing, all right. No one could remember having seen him that morning. Coach Smith paced the floor of the dressing room, chewing nervously on his cigar. Was it foul play? But then Butch was big enough to take care of himself—200 pounds of sheer bone and muscle. . . .

There was a timid knock on the door of the locker room. Every one jumped. Perhaps this was Butch now. Coach Smith threw the door open. His face fell. It wasn't Butch. It was a little man in a gray overcoat and a derby hat set at a jaunty angle on his head.

He said—"Good afternoon, gentlemen. Can I be of service to you? I understand one of your football players is missing."

COACH SMITH almost yanked him into the dressing room as he said savagely—"What do you know about this? What kind of a game is this anyway?"

"No game at all," said the man calmly. "And I don't know anything—yet. But perhaps I can help you. Here is my card." He reached into an elegant pin seal card case, produced a neatly engraved white rectangle, and handed it to Smith.

The entire coaching staff and most of the players crowded around to look over Smith's shoulders. What they read on the card was "Bernard Swike—Football Geneologist," and then in smaller letters —"The Swike Football Geneological Bureau. Football players traced, listed and identified. Are your football players pedigreed? Then how do you know who they are? Or dont you care? Our pedigrees guaranteed."

"By Jove!" said Coach Smith, "how did you know that Butch Rackham was missing?"

The man who called himself a football genealogist lit a cigarette elegantly before he spoke and then said—"Ah . . . It was about time. Have you a picture of Rackham?"

Three assistant managers rushed to thrust a program of the college State-Polynormal game into his hands. On page 3 was a full-page reproduction of Halfback Rackham. It showed a stalwart football player in the act of throwing a pass. Beneath the helmet was a rugged, scowling face.

Swike studied it for a moment before he blew another cloud of smoke and said—"Hmmm. He looks older than when he was playing at Tech."

"Tech!" Howled Coach Smith . . . I didn't get him from Tech. I got him from Hill Top."

"NO," said Swike, "that was his brother. He had a cousin who played at Maple Side under the name of Reckham—Slug Reckham—but that is not the same fellow. There was also a Butch Reckman playing at City three years ago who might have been Rackham except that Rackham was playing at Institute that year under the name of Rickham. Our bureau keeps track of all those things for you."

"Then you mean to say that was not Butch Rackham we had here?" asked Smith.

"I didn't say that," Swike replied quietly. "There was a Slug Rachem who played down in Texas last year who looks a lot like this chap, but he transferred to the Coast later and is playing there now under the name of Richman—Spike Richman. I did his pedigree for the Coast champions last year. Tell me this, did Rackham play for you last week?" There was a chorus of assent. "Umhm. Then he couldn't have been the Pug Rechnim I saw at Southern State. On the other hand, it might have been Rackham at Southern State, at that, because the chap playing for you might have been Pug's brother who left Midwest about a month ago. The pedigrees we furnish tell you exactly who the players are, where they have been and under what names.

There was a sound of a whistle, and an official appeared at the door of the dressing room. "Time," he said. There was an uneasy stir in the dressing room.

"But my player . . ." Coach Smith said—"that doesn't get us our halfback . . ."

MR. SWIKE consulted a notebook that he drew from his vest pocket. "October 18 . . . 25 . . . November 7, November 14," he murmured half to himself. "Yes, it's about the time. Go out onto the field, gentlemen, and the best of luck to you. You will find your missing halfback there. My service can prevent such unfortunate incidents as this. I will leave my card." He turned and went through the door. The team filed out and trotted onto the field. Mr. Swike had been right. The missing football player was there. He was playing left halfback for the Polynormal team under the name of James Rockham.

Heart Attack Fatal to Navin

President of Detroit Club Succumbs While on Bridle Path.

Chicago Cubs in the deciding game of the World Series.

Navin, discarding his "poker" face for once, capered like the school boy that his closest friends knew him to be at heart.

Today, Mr. and Mrs. Navin, both enthusiastic horseback riders, set out from the hunt club, Navin astride his favorite Irish jumper, Masquerade.

Along the wooded trail Mrs. Navin lost sight of her husband. Then she saw his riderless horse cantering toward the stables. She galloped back to the club and gave the alarm.

Roy Thorne, stables superintendent, found Navin lying beside the bridle path.

Was Power in League.

Taken to the nearest hospital, he was pronounced dead after 25 minutes of attempted resuscitation.

News of his death brought a flood of telegrams from members of the baseball fraternity. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, declared that "there is real mourning today throughout the membership" of organized baseball.

Judge Landis said he and Will Harridge, president of the American League, would attend the funeral.

For many years Navin had been vice president of the league. He served temporarily as president following the retirement of Byron Bancroft Johnson and was a power in all league councils.

Navin, a lawyer by training, acquired an interest in the Detroit Tigers in 1902 and from that time on devoted to baseball the acumen that would have taken him far in any profession.

Wasps Begin Working For William and Mary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., Nov. 13.—Terminating three days' rest, the Emory and Henry College gridders yesterday began work for what promises to be one of the toughest games on their 1935 schedule, the tilt with the William and Mary Indians at Williamsburg next Saturday.

The crushing 28-to-0 defeat handed Oglethorpe University at Big Stone Gap the past Saturday was evidence that the Wasps have improved since their defeat at the hands of Marshall. A much faster offense and better defensive work in the middle of the line is evident.

52 Assorted Horses Vie In Middleburg Meeting

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Virginia racing enthusiasts learned today from the entry list announced by Daniel G. Sands, secretary, that 52 timber, brush and flat horses will compete in the opening of the Middleburg Racing Association's fall meet next Saturday.

Leading stables of the East have entered horses in the largest list in the history of the meet. Among the foremost entrants is Indigo Gray, steeplechaser of the Northwood Stables, Oyster Bay, Long Island, who won the Middleburg spring meet.

Grid Experts Eye Wilson, Berwanger

S. Methodist, Chicago Stars on Spot in Week-End Game.

Both Seen as Probable All-American Backfield Selections.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The All-American football roll call this week features the qualifications of Chicago's great Jay Berwanger and Southern Methodist's "Mighty Atom," Bobby Wilson, for the halfback positions.

There's well-grounded conviction in the Big Ten that Berwanger is the All-America backfield this year, all by himself. However that may be, no question of the "Flying Dutchman's" ability remains after his spectacular performance against Ohio State. Berwanger, a quintuple threat, was the outstanding back on an ordinary team last year. This is his last season. The critics say he's better than ever in every department of play, including ballugging, kicking, passing, blocking and tackling. Apparently the only thing he doesn't do for the Maroon is play the accordion.

Pacific Coast critics got an eyeful of Bobby Wilson, Southern Methodist star, in the game with U. C. L. A. this Monday.

Enthusiasts in the Southwest Conference, which includes three of the Nation's top-ranking teams in Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice, believe their all-star offerings would whip the best combination any other major section could put together. They may be right, at that. Texas has at least two prime All-America candidates for the line in Capt. Darrell Lester, giant center at T. C. U. and a 1934 all-star choice, and Truman Spain, S. M. U. tackle.

Tangora Among Stars.

Two outstanding forwards added to this week's All-America list are Princeton's Fred Ritter, a tackle, and Northwestern's Paul Tangora, a running guard who helped raise havoc with Notre Dame's defense. Both were good enough last Saturday to take the headlines.

Further indorsements are in hand for the performances of Larry Lutz, California tackle; Eddie Gryboski, Illinois guard; Ed Widseth and Dick Smith, Minnesota tackles; Alex Drobnitch, Denver guard; Sidney Wagner, Michigan State guard; Haygood Paterson, Auburn tackle. Centers who caught the eye of observers included Lind, Northwestern; Cullinan, Princeton, and Chavoor, U. C. L. A.

According to our West Coast observers, Monk Moscrip, of Stanford, except for his goal-kicking, cannot be rated any higher at end than his teammate, Topping, or Jack Brittingham, of California. However it's a little difficult to throw out Moscrip's kicking ability. His field goals provided the margin of Stanford's last three victories, accounting for 12 of the total of 18 points scored by the Indians against Washington, Santa Clara and Southern California.

Playing on a losing team, Johnny Leys, captain and end at the University of Virginia, has given a whale of a performance all season. The week's roll call also adds several other ends to the list, including Gaynell Tinsley, Louisiana State; Henry Longfellow, Northwestern; Bernard Scherer, Nebraska, the best in the Big Six, and Earl Wray, Baylor. Walter Winika, of Rutgers, embellished his previous top-notch record as perhaps the East's outstanding wingman.

Contests Title Claims.

Appalachia, Va., Nov. 13.—Coach Chauncey De Vault announced today that he would contest Coeburn's claim of the Wise County Conference football championship, before the county school board.

Coach De Vault said that he was basing his claim that Appalachia had earned a tie with Coeburn on the rules of the Virginia State Literary and Athletic League, which on its basis of championship ratings awards 1,000 points for a victory and 500 points for a tie game.

Norton Team Loses.

Norton, Va., Nov. 13.—Failure to convert the extra point after a first-quarter touchdown cost Norton a tie game here Armistice Day, and the locals fell before Appalachia, 7 to 6, in a bitterly fought battle. The game, played on a mud-soaked field, drew a large holiday crowd.

Headed for the Rose Bowl Battle—They Hope

The quartet of backs pictured with determination written upon their faces belong to North Carolina University, thus far unbeaten and untied, which is bidding for the invitation to the Rose Bowl. Left to right, they are Co-Capt. Harry Montgomery, Co-Capt. Herman Snyder, Jim Hutchins and Don Jackson. North Carolina will be in line for the bid if it hurdles Duke on Saturday and then defeats the weak University of Virginia team.

Terror Line-up Named for C. U. Game

Sadowski at Tackle, Ken Adriance Is Sent to Center Position.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WESTMINSTER, Md., Nov. 13. The 11 Green Terrors who will start Saturday's game against Catholic University in Griffith Stadium, Washington, were named after today's practice.

Head Coach Charley Havens found it necessary to make two replacements. Frank Sadowski will play right half instead of Leroy Campbell, and Ken Adriance will be at center in place of Bill Reith. Campbell and Reith are not in top form physically.

The revamped line-up is as follows:

Adriance is regarded as a satisfactory replacement at center. He has been playing that position most of the time since Rieth was hurt in the Bucknell game. But Adriance's place is at halfback and thus Western Maryland's offensive forces are reduced by one good man when he is at center. Then, too, Campbell came out of the Boston game in good shape and it is doubtful if he will play against the Cardinals Saturday, so Western Maryland is really short two halfbacks.

Both Sadowski and Brennan are signal callers but they will both be in the game at the same time and the job will go to Brennan who used good judgment in directing the Terror's successful attack against the Eagles of Boston.

Every man in the line against Catholic U. Saturday, and two of the starting backs, played 60 full minutes of football at Boston last Saturday. Only two substitutions were made in that game—Sadowski for Campbell and Woodberry for Draper.

Two Potomac Gridmen Return From Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Two football players from Potomac State College, who were injured in the contest at Rosier Field, Fairmont, between Fairmont State and Potomac State, were able to return to their homes after treatment in a Fairmont hospital.

Chester Witt, 19, of Keyser, sustained a concussion of the brain while Leo Krovoski, 18, of Morgantown, received a compound fracture of the collar bone.

Tennis Dates Announced.

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—The British Lawn Tennis Association today fixed July 25, 27 and 28 as the dates for the 1935 Davis Cup challenge round. The draw among nations which will challenge Great Britain's three-year cup reign will be held February 2.

Those Obsolete Field Goals Still Turn Loss to Victory

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

THE field goal isn't quite as obsolete an offensive football weapon this season as some old-timers, reminiscing over games of yesteryear, would have you believe.

In fact, more than a score of college games have been won by the three points gained through goals from the field. And, a survey reveals, field goals have been quite common in every sector, even though they may not have been the deciding factor in contests.

Stanford's Cardinals, Rose Bowl competitors the past two seasons, apparently are the chief exponents of the field goal now. Fortunate in having an excellent booter in the husky end, Jim (Monk) Moscrip, the big Red team can point to three victories gained by this route.

The Cardinals outpointed Santa Clara 9 to 6, won from Washington, 6 to 0, on a pair of goals and last Saturday finally turned back Southern California, 3 to 0, as Monk kicked one in the last 40 seconds.

Only L. S. U. Loss.

The Ramblers of Notre Dame needed a place kick by Marty Peters to whip Pitt's Panthers, 9 to 6, a few weeks ago.

Rice, in its opening game, downed Louisiana State, 10 to 7, with a field goal. The Louisianans haven't been beaten since.

One of the early season jolts came to Kansas State when little Fort Hays Teachers scored a field goal to win. All of Colgate's sleight-of-hand forwards and laterals couldn't match the field goal Holy Cross made to win, 3 to 0.

Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones, beginning a new coaching job at Oklahoma, was happy to have the field goal that enabled his Sooners to drop Colorado.

Last Saturday Illinois, expected to bow to an up-and-coming Michigan team, turned in some sort of surprise by that slender margin of the field goal.

Other Victories.

Some of the other games that have been won with kicks from the field include Oglethorpe over Erskine, Michigan Normal over Iowa Teachers, Carroll over Ripon, Western Teachers over Eastern Teachers, Bucknell over Western Maryland, Mansfield Teachers over Bloomsburg Teachers, York over Midland, Daniel Baker over Southwestern Teachers, Akron over Kent State and Whitman over College of Idaho.

In these days of the exploitation of the lateral pass perhaps the ancient field goal doesn't play as prominent a part as in goneby years, but try and find a coach who won't welcome and cajole a youngster who can bust one through the middle of the uprights.

Dinner Given New Western Md. Head

Plans for Benefit Football Game to Be Laid.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., Nov. 13.—An informal reception for Dr. Fred G. Holloway, newly elected president of Western Maryland College, will be held here Friday night by the Carroll County Club.

The reception will follow a dinner at which Dr. Holloway will be the chief speaker. Willard Hawkins is president of the club.

Plans will be discussed for the sale of tickets to the Western Maryland-University of Maryland football game in Baltimore December 7. Proceeds from the game will be used to construct a field house at the college here.

Terror Gridders Will Pay to Play

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., Nov. 13.—Western Maryland College football players will pay $2.20 each for the privilege of playing against the University of Maryland in Baltimore Stadium December 7.

The postseason game is to raise funds for a field house at the college here. Western Maryland students, instead of being admitted for the customary 55-cent student tickets, will pay $2.20 each. So the football players joined in the agreement and will pay their own admissions also.

H. C. Byrd, acting president of the University of Maryland, has said that the entire proceeds would go to erection of a field house and that Maryland will not even take actual expenses from the receipts.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 13.—Varsity basketball teams representing the University of Maryland and West Virginia University, will meet in Cumberland for the third straight season when the Old Liner and Mountaineer quints tangle here on Monday, February 10, 1936.

Announcement of a midseason date for the third neutral court meeting of the Southern Conference and Eastern Intercollege Basketball Conference rivals was contained in a letter from H. Burton Shipley, cage coach at Maryland.

IT DEVELOPED yesterday that the weatherman obviously doesn't believe in football so far as Tech and Western are concerned. Blocking to perfection, he succeeded in running perfect interference for both teams, stopping their interhigh game for the second straight day.

Another attempt to carve the classic into interhigh history is to be made today at 3:30 p. m. at Central Stadium. Principal Frank A. Daniel of Tech expressed hope, at least, that some sort of arrangement could be reached with the elements for the contest. The Tech principal pointed out that the Central field drains well and that the surface will not be soggy today as would be expected from yesterday's downpour.

Just what will be done if it rains again today is a matter of question, since Central plays Eastern tomorrow in the big game of the year. A double-header was suggested in some quarters, a novelty new to interhigh football. Coach Hap Hardell of Tech said a double-header would be a "fine thing." He suggested that the students could be let out early for a two-game spectacle of this kind.

Everybody Chafes.

Hardell and Coach Dan Ahern of Western, who wanted to play Tuesday, spent the day more or less chafing at the inaction. The players also chafed. Neither team practiced. It was quite a dreary day all around for the football boys.

By the United Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 13.—Gene Kunes and Dick Metz came through in smooth form today to win first money in the 36-hole best-ball competition of the Mid-South golf tournament.

Kunes blasted out of a bunker and sank an 8-foot putt on the eighteenth green to give his team a 68 for today's round, and 137 for the 36 holes. First place carries $400 in prize money.

Tommy Armour and Bobby Cruickshank added a 69 to their 69 of yesterday for a total of 138 strokes, second place and $300.

Willie Klein and Jimmie Hines, whose brilliant 65 led the nearest competitor by 3 points yesterday, played even par for eight hales today, then slumped, taking 74. Their third-place score of 139 won $160.

Carolina Team Near Top.

The North Carolina team of Palmer Maples, Rocky Mount, and Ralph Miner, New Bern, made today's trip in 73, which, added to their 68 of yesterday, gave them 141 and a tie with the Bulla-Loving team. John Bulla and Benny Loving took 70 strokes today, one less than their 71 of yesterday.

Thirty-six holes of individual competition will begin tomorrow.

Other low scorers today: Tom Creavy and Herman Barron—142; Leo Walper and Ralph Beach—143;

Nationally Known Football Authority.

WORD comes from the deep South that happy football days are near again for "Ole Miss"—such triumphant days as those of 1910 when the Mighty Mississippians swept over the opposition with the irrestible force of Old Man River. Tulane and Alabama were bothed swamped beneath 16-0 scores that year.

Let's hope the reports are true, for her arch-rival, Mississippi State, has secured the coaching service of Maj. Ralph Sasse, former mentor of West Point, to stem any "Ole Miss" gridiron flood.

Politically speaking, the all-time team would hold its own in any company. Former United States Senator and present director of the RFC in Washington, D. C., Hubert Stephens, played a lion-hearted game at guard alongside of reliable Tom Kimbrough, now dean of the Mississippi Law School. Another on this powerful '96 team was William Cook, justice of Mississippi's Supreme Court, but then known as a fullback who could hit the line with the fury of a Dixie tornado.

George Bilbo put as much fiery enthusiasm into his guard play as his illustrious uncle, United States Senator Bilbo, now employs in one of his impassioned speeches before Congress.

Wherever the old era of football is mentioned in the land of Swords and Roses, the name of Cleveland Huggins stands out as that of the greatest athlete in "Ole Miss" annals. "Hug," like Church Lee, has passed on to join George Gipp and other immortals in football's Valhalla.

The success of the 1910 team could be partially attributed to the inspiring tackle play of Earl Kin-

Malbrouk, Aided by Delay at Start, Wins in Gallop at Pimlico

9-1 Shot Gets Respite at Barrier

Rid of Jockey's Weight for 3 Minutes While Bridle Is Repaired.

end. Students of form contend that Malbrouk's three-minute relief from his weight caused the upset.

Winner Pays $21.

On November 6, his last start, Malbrouk was a beaten horse in the stretch when Scotch Bun, in going to the front bumped him. Scotch Bun won, but was disqualified, and Malbrouk was moved into the winner's position.

The chances of today's winner were not considered bright, and he paid a substantial $21. The race was run over a track a fetlock deep in mud.

The daily double brought a payoff of $236.50. The winning combination was that of Vandacerules, in the first, and Hidden Dust in the third.

Abel Saddles Winner.

Whitey Abel, the owner, jockey and trainer, saddled the winner of the first race, Vanda Cerulea, a little filly which used to make her way at Charles Town. Abel left the riding to Apprentice Jockey Willie Horn and he made no mistakes to lead Adams Eve and Flower Time to the wire after a splash of 6 furlongs. The winner was lukewarm in the betting at an $11.60 mutuel.

Dock Light, the property of Arthur Hagan, won his third straight steeplechase in the Damask, another of those 13-jump contests at 2 miles. Despite his excellent record, Dock Light paid a $12.30 mutuel. Black Feathers was second and Matagain third in the field of 11, 9 of which finished the course. The lone mishap saw Lena's King lose his rider, H. Little, at the eleventh brush. Ibnita was pulled up when hopelessly outclassed going to the eighth fence. G. Racine gave the winner a perfect ride and had him forwardly placed from start to finish. Capstan, the horse with a "run out" complex, wore blinkers today. He stayed on the course but failed to figure in the serious part of the struggle.

Hidden Dust Wins.

Hidden Dust answered the whip of Jockey Don Meade to score a thrilling nose decision over Chiliad in the third race, a six-furlong sprint. The rivals clashed at the sixteenth pole and battled it out courageously to the end. Don Romiro, the favorite, was third, far back. Hidden Dust paid $24.40.

The favorite players were singing in the rain at the finish of the fourth race when My Colin breezed home with speed to spare at a $4.30 mutuel. Jockey Joe Renick had nothing to do but guide. Gold Mesh was second most of the way and third money went to Atholton.

Wedding Ring brought trainer Jimmy Stewart his second straight winner. The son of Golden Broom fought it out from the start with Pancoast and had a daylight lead at the end. Pancoast failed to save second from Gifted Lady which slipped through on the rail entering the stretch. Wedding Ring paid $7.40.

VANDA CERULEA, quickest to begin, met repeated efforts from FLOWER TIME, saved ground wherever possible and held on strongly to outstay ADAMS EVE. Latter secured racing room on the inside from the beginning, responded nicely when put to a drive and finished with excellent courage. FLOWER TIME forced a steady pace from the start, offered stiff contention and held on well for the closing drive. BENNY FOLICY, forced to race on the outside early, entered contention approaching the home stretch, then finished on the inside. RED LABEL was out in the middle of the track throughout. NERVY NELLA showed a good effort. MARYS MAY was outrun. BOKIE B. broke slowly and was never a factor.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:03. Off at 2:04½. Winner, A. Hasan's ch. g. DOCK LIGHT, full of run and reserved until going a mile, took command at the ninth fence, then, fencing cleanly for the balance of the trip, drew out into an easy lead in the last half mile. BLACK FEATHER showed good ability at all of his fences, responded to punishment and finished wearing the winner down at every stride. OUR SHIP was steadied in the early racing, then closed with excellent courage when placed to a hard drive. AMERICAN BELLE could not reach a forward position. BENDER FIRST began tiring after six furlongs. POST BRIGADE and APATHY were held safe.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:54. Off at 4:55. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEDDING RING, $7.40, $5.40, $3.60; GIFTED LADY, $14.30, $6.90; PANCOAST, $3.30.

WEDDING RING, taken under slight restraint when PANCOAST moved to the front, saved ground to gain command when straightened into the home stretch, bore out all during the closing furlong, but came away under urging. GIFTED LADY, badly outrun for the first half mile, slipped through on the inside when moving up sharply and came determinedly at the end. PANCOAST was hustled to gain early command was forced wide entering the home stretch and tired after being overtaken. VACILLATE faltered after moving up at the stretch turn. MALBROUK, fractious at the gate, was away forwardly and had good speed from the start, moved into command when back stretch, took the challenges from BOSTON BROOK and EXHIBIT and held OUR REIGH safe in the drive. The latter was reserved in the early racing, moved up stoutly when called upon, wore down BOSTON BROOK in the drive but could not reach the leader. BOSTON BROOK, well placed from the start, hung on with good courage. EXHIBIT had good early speed, but weakened. BEST BID could never threaten. LEGUME trailed throughout and appeared to dislike the going.

SOCK DOLOGER sprinted into a long lead after reaching the back stretch, saved ground all during the running, held on tenaciously under a strong finish and just lasted long enough. WISE ADVOCATE, racing closest in attendance of the winner, responded to punishment and finished wearing the winner down at every stride. OUR SHIP was steadied in the early racing, then closed with excellent courage when placed to a hard drive. AMERICAN BELLE could not reach a forward position. Rising Demand Expands Steel To 54 Per Cent Increase in Buying by Railroads a Feature of the Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 13.—Placing steel production at 54 per cent of capacity, a rise of 1½ points above last week and the highest since the first week of February, Iron Age in its weekly review asserted today that demand for the metal has expanded in various consuming channels.

Conforming to the increase in production activities, scrap metal prices have strengthened, lifting the publication's composite from $12.58 to $12.75 a ton.

"Railroad buying is steadily improving, automotive demand has shown a further gain, Government-financed construction projects are being expedited and, finally, the expectation of higher prices has resulted in considerable anticipatory covering," the review declared.

"The recent advance of $2 a ton on billets, blooms, slabs and skelp is primarily responsible for the current movement to get under cover on finished steel. Although increased material costs and the possibility of wage advances at the mills would seem to make higher finished steel prices inevitable, definite moves in that direction are still lacking.

"Motor car makers are taking steel more freely than at any time since the grand rush for material of last January and February.

"Rail inquiries definitely in prospect total 50,000 tons. The Missouri Pacific is inquiring for 500 box cars and may buy a total of 4,000 freight cars. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas is considering the purchase of 1,000 cars."

Northern Pacific Buys 15,000 Tons of Rails

St. Paul, Nov. 13 (AP).—Purchase of 15,000 tons of rail was announced today by the Northern Pacific Railroad, which said it was the company's largest order in seven years.

E. M. Willis, purchasing agent, said the rail, bought for approximately $500,000, would be used in 1936. It will be supplied by Bethlehem Steel, Carnegie-Illinois Steel, and Colorado Fuel & Iron.

Treaty Continues Wheat Pressure

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Increasing talk of likelihood Canada has bargained to get rid partly of her tremendous wheat surplus to the United States jolted wheat prices downward today.

Persistent liquidating sales from holders of wheat futures caused a fall of nearly 2 cents a bushel here at times. The tumble carried December contracts to almost 17 cents under the season's high that was reached October 5.

Wheat closed nervous, ⅛ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish, December, 93¼ to 93⅜; corn, unchanged to ½ lower, December 59 to 59⅛; oats, unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 7 cents.

Travel Gains 50% With Cut In Rail Fares

Western Roads Adopt Low One-Way Rates for Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Low basic one-way passenger rates on Western railroads have been permanently adopted, Hugh S. Siddall, chairman of the Western Passenger Association, announced today, due to a sharp upturn in business.

"Since the Western railways decided to take the initiative with reduced passenger fares in December, 1933, Passenger traffic on those lines has jumped 50 per cent," Siddall said.

"In the first eight months of this year passenger revenues have climbed nearly $6,000,000 and accounted for the entire advance in total railroad revenues in the West."

The rates are 3 cents a mile, first class accommodations; 2 cents a mile, coaches; 1½ cents, for coaches on transcontinental trips, and 2 cents, for tourist sleepers on transcontinental trips.

Round trip reduced rates have not been made permanent, Siddall said.

Canada's Wheat Crop Estimated Under 1934

Ottawa, Nov. 13 (AP).—The dominion bureau of statistics estimated Canada's 1935 wheat crop today at 273,971,000 bushels, about 2,000,000 bushels less than that of 1934.

The crop report containing the second estimate of the wheat yield brought production down from a September 11 estimate of 290,541,000 bushels to place it slightly below the 1934 yield while estimated yields of most other serial crops were higher than those of last year.

Rally at Close Carries Some Stocks to New Highs; Government Bonds Lower.

By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 13.—Government bonds were not helped much by the rising Federal deficit and the urging of credit expansion in official circles, but stocks maintained a steady tone. Stock trading volume kept low on any tendency to liquidate. Early weakness was succeeded in the closing hours by a firm tone. December wheat closed a cent lower at 93⅜ cents a bushel.

Stocks were dominated by a dozen issues, most of which advanced for special reasons. Container A and B shares rose sharply on the clearing up of preferred dividends. American Bank Note continued its rapid climb. In the last two weeks the rise has amounted to 50 per cent. Johns-Manville spurted 3 points in a short trading flurry, partly in response to bullish predictions for the building industry and Government hints at pressure to secure larger and cheaper real estate loans. Coca-Cola dropped further.

Radio was the leader in activity and it rose to a new high price. International Nickel found no let-up in demand, in expectation of earnings expansion. Metals in general were moderately higher. Mail orders improved fractionally. Utilities were mixed. Telephone and Pacific Lighting gained a point or so. General Motors, selling ex dividend, recovered part of the payment. Chrysler was firmer. Liquors were firm. Most other groups were mixed. Alleghany and Chesapeake issues gave tone to the rail market, as did Union Pacific.

Business and Inflation.

No change in money rates was made. President Roosevelt was quoted as urging lower interest rates, so that the huge reservoir of excess bank credit might be tapped further to assist business recovery. Meanwhile, others in the Administration advocated extension of real estate loans.

While discussion of bank credit expansion, and of possible means of preventing excessive credit inflation grows, the real attack against sound position goes on within the Government. Today it was announced that the public deficit had exceeded one and a half billions for this fiscal year. Therein lies the real danger of inflation. It certainly will be more than double that before the end of June. Business has improved, as the President and his associates point out; but as some plain-spoken speakers before the American Brankers Association convention are saying, it isn't going to reach the point of real prosperity until the Government does more than give lip service to the cause of prosperity.

The chief recovery measure has fallen by the wayside, and buried in the Supreme Court's back yard. Business as a result has had a decided fillip, but it still is faced with numerous measures calculated to promote social reform and at the same time bear down heavily on trade. Unless a radical reduction be made soon in Federal expenditures (and that could be done without starving any one now on relief rolls), business will find itself overwhelmed with taxation and excluded from the new capital market, as so ably pointed out today by President Brown of the Johns-Manville Corporation.

Trouble in China.

In foreign exchange the weakness of the franc, selling under the gold point, kept the subject of devaluation alive. Alarm on that score apparently is slight in another gold country, Holland, for the Netherlands Bank again cut its discount rate. Guilders were unchanged. Chinese currency was steady.

How policies which, at the start are advocated, as purely economic moves may have far-reaching social and political consequences is illustrated by the most recent Japanese aggression in China. The Japanese do not like the swing of China toward a currency managed with respect to sterling. As most observers here look upon the matter, that development explains the new pressure brought upon China by Japan. For all that the United States must take full blame, for its silver purchasing policy has forced China from the silver standard, all to no other possible purpose than the enrichment of a handful of silver men in the West. Unfortunately the cost is by no means borne entirely by American taxpayers, and the cost is to be counted in more valuable things than cash.

On the trade side the day's news supported the markets. Good demand and expectation of higher prices for steel had a bullish effect on sections of the market. Higher prices are in the making for everything but raw materials in excessive supply. The implications of that are not altogether favorable.

26 Industries Net 68% More In 3d Quarter

Only 4 Report Declines Compared With Same Period in 1934.

New York, Nov. 13.—On the basis of income reports of 234 important companies now available, third quarter earnings of industrial corporations are 68.8 per cent more than a year ago, according to a survey by the Standard Statistics Co. This rise was made possible by an 18 per cent expansion of industrial activity, illustrating the more rapid progress of profits than of sales in a recovery movement, given reasonable stability of prices and expenses.

Of the 26 major industries represented, only four made less satisfactory reports than a year ago, advertising (including printing and publishing), coal, food products and tobacco. In the first group, reduced advertising appropriations that accompanied the uncertainty with which the demise of NRA was surrounded were responsible for the decline. The coal industry showed a moderate composite loss as compared with a profit a year ago, continuing the unfavorable trend that had been in progress during earlier months. Increased expenses since the miners' strike will do nothing to improve this condition.

Higher Tobacco Costs.

Food products companies remained squeezed between high material costs and consumer resistance to price advances, but it is significant that their comparison with a year ago was somewhat less unfavorable than in the first half. The tobacco showing reflected higher tobacco costs for cigar producers.

As had been expected, the steel industry transformed a large loss in the third quarter of last year into a fair-sized profit this year, reflecting substantially higher operations. Automobile producers greatly improved their earnings, despite the September close downs for model changes. Auto parts manufacturers made an even better relative showing.

Building supply company earnings responded to sharp increases in construction, although they are still low. Electrical equipment producers reported a 100 per cent gain in total net, having enjoyed a substantial sales gain. The same is true of machinery companies. These industries reflect in greater or less degree the first important stirring of demand for capital goods.

With industrial production for the current quarter likely to be around 15 per cent higher than a year ago, earnings will again be up substantially. Full-year profits of industrial companies are likely to be 35 per cent to 40 per cent higher than in 1934.

Great Northern Plans To Re-Value Preferred

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—A plan of recapitalization involving a change in the par value of the preferred stock will be sumitted to Great Northern Railway Co. stockholders at the special meeting to be held December 20, the company announced today. Change will be in line with the Minnesota business corporation law.

It is expected that the revision will create shares of no par value in place of the present $100 par preferred stock.

Cigarette Output Hits New High Mark

New York, Nov. 13.—The third largest monthly cigarette production total on record was set in October, with output increasing nearly 2,800,000,000 cigarettes over October last year, and carrying the total for the first ten months of 1935 up close to 113,000,000,000, the highest total for any ten-month period on record. This year 10,718,132,697 cigarettes were turned out in October, a gain of around 19 per cent over October, 1934. The only two months in the history of the tobacco industry to show output in excess of that figure were July this year, with 13,138,287,463, and May, 1933, with 12,822,972,513 cigarettes.

McCrory Stores Plan Approved by Court

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The so-called Merrill plan for reorganizing McCrory Stores Corp. was approved today by Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson. This plan, providing for retirement of existing debentures and creditors' claims held by merchants and manufacturers, was said to have the support of most of the merchandise creditors and holders of preferred stock, as well as a stockholders' committee representing about one-third of the holders of common stock.

It is estimated that new debentures and new stock issued under the plan will provide $6,000,000 in working capital for the new company after liquidating all indebtedness.

Reo Motor Adopts 6% Finance Plan

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Reo Motor Car Co., in co-operation with the Commercial Investment Trust Co., financing concern, is instituting a 6 per cent time payment plan, it was announced today. Similar plans were recently put into effect by General Motors Acceptance Corporation and other automobile financing companies.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Business on the stock exchange was quiet today awaiting the election outcome. Gilt-edged securities were firmly supported and speculators purchased oil shares. Other sections, including transatlantic issues, after an early start, recovered on renewed support. The market closed firmer.

Paris—An indecisive trend prevailed on the bourse today with rentes and industrials showing slight declines. International issues were firmer as traders watched the financial situation closely. The closing tone was irregular.

Berlin—A lively opening caused an improvement in prices on the boerse today. Business slackened later and the market closed cheerful.

Steel Prices Unchanged,

State Finances In South Show Decisive Gains

Eleven States Report Higher Revenues for This Year.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Nov. 13.—Eleven Southern States reported decided improvement today in financial conditions and foresaw increased revenues for 1936.

Kentucky's revenue, including Federal funds, was $43,421,680 in 1934-35, compared to $35,684,650 in 1933-34.

Virginia's big gain in revenue came with the State-controlled liquor sales. Total revenues in Virginia for the fiscal year ended June 30 were $59,945,779, compared with $42,899,766 for the previous year.

Operating on a budget, South Carolina in the last two years has retired virtually all her unfunded debt, estimated by State officials at $500,000 over the previous year.

North Carolina, derived its revenue chiefly from a 3 per cent sales tax.

Florida Collections.

Florida's collections were approximately $35,000,000 for 1934-35, against $34,932,655 for 1933-34.

Alabama reported taxes paid increased from $27,586,078 in 1934 to $29,889,397 in 1935.

Gov. Conner of Mississippi estimated a surplus of $4,000,000 for the new year.

State Auditor L. S. Baynard, jr., of Louisiana, said: "Louisiana finances are a lot better this year and will be better still next year."

Arkansas' total revenues for the year ended June 30 were about $20,750,000, compared with $17,500,000 the previous 12 months.

Tennessee's figures for this year were available only for nine months, but they showed $1,467,967 more money had been collected for that period compared with all of 1934.

State Auditor Tom Wisdom of Georgia said "right now we are up with all our debts, nothing outstanding for the year."

Netherlands Bank Cuts Rate to 3½%

Amsterdam, Netherlands, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Bank of the Netherlands today reduced its discount rate from 4 per cent to 3½ per cent.

The reduction of the bank rate, the third such cut in recent weeks, was due to the continued easing of the monetary position, said authorities, and also to the improvement of the bank's gold position.

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

KEY WEST, Florida, is 125 miles off the mainland of the State, joined to it, however, by a railroad line that spans the distance on pilings connecting a series of islands that follow an arc shape southwest off the lower tip of the Atlantic coast. Cuba lies less than 100 miles away from Key West across open water.

Poems that once laid in manuscript form eight years in the grave of his wife, now constitute part of the published works of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, English poet and painter. Rossetti married in 1860 at the age of 32. Two years later his wife died, and in his grief the poet-painter put all his unpublished works in his wife's coffin and had them buried with her.

For eight years the manuscripts remained in his wife's grave. Then, at the insistence of friends, he consented to have the poems exhumed and published. These poems, together with a book of ballads and sonnets, and some translations of Italian poets, constitute his entire poetic works.

Rossetti is best remembered as one of the more prominent leaders on the movement to bring painting back to the simplicity that characterized it in the Middle Ages.

The "Share-the-Wealth" idea was practiced on an ancient plan by Carl Borromeo, 16th century political boss in Italy. He sold two cities, Oria and Francavilla, for cash—collected 40,000 ounces of gold and scattered it among the poor in a single day.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY

Hartford Himself

By Harry J. Tuthill

Imagine! A tintype of Hartford Oakdale in the lining of the pocketbook mother found.
Yes sir, that's Hartford. To a T.
What! The idea. Let me look.
It's him. Look, mother. The eyes. The mouth.
The nose. The firm jaw. Look, Jo.
Let me see... Bosh! That's just a picture of a boy.
Yes I, too, am sure, Mrs. Bungle, this is not that fellow Oakdale.
But Monty, you didn't get a good look at...
Peggy honey, please stop pushing that tintype right into Mr. Eldorado's face.
But mother, it's so odd. The resemblance is so...
Clear. We can't be mistaken. Positively.
Really, I'm sure Mrs. Bungle is right. The notion this is that...ah, fellow Oakdale is absurd. Impossible.
